INVESTIGATORS from the Illinois Environmental Protection Agency drill for toxic chemicals on Madison Avenue.

Toxic chemicals found at Novotny/QuikTrip site

By Andy Siering
Staff writer

GRANITE CITY — Chemical contamination found buried at the planned site of a QuikTrip store and gasoline station at Madison and Niedringhaus Avenues has delayed the project and could conceivably scuttle it, a spokesman for QuikTrip said Monday.

A crew from the Illinois Environmental Protection Agency was drilling Monday next door to Novotny Chevrolet on a parking lot that held a filling station many years ago.

Novotny is moving to a new location on Illinois Route Three near West Pontoon Road.

QuikTrip hired a private firm that conducted an environmental audit at Madison and Niedringhaus avenues in August. The company found petroleum contaminants, including benzene, toluene and xylene, said Tom Miller, the IEPA supervisor at the site.

John Dix, director of real estate for the QuikTrip Corp. in St. Louis, said the firm also found trace amounts of acrolene, a chemical used in the manufacture of tear gas.

All are classified as "volatiles," which means they turn to vapor on contact with air.

The IEPA's Miller said that since the chemicals are buried at the site, "chances are fairly minimal" that there is any health risk to residents of the block or passersby.

Benzene can cause leukemia and other blood problems, said Tom Hornshaw, a toxicologist with the IEPA. Xylene and toluene can can cause headaches and dizziness in low concentrations; in high concentrations, they can cause death by suppressing the central nervous system, he said.

Acrolene can cause tearing and asthmatic reactions in low concentrations; in high concentrations, it can cause death, Hornshaw said.

He said industry guidelines call for workers to be exposed to no more than one-tenth part acrolene in one million in an eight-hour day.

Dix, cautioning that he didn't have the private firm's report in front of him, said he thought the amount of acrolene supposedly found at the site was 17 parts per million.

QuikTrip reported the firm's findings to the owners of the various parcels on the block, Dix said.

"They declined to report it to the IEPA, so we had to," Dix said.

Dix emphasized that acrolene is "not dioxin, not a cancer-causing agent." He stressed that it was not even certain whether acrolene was present.

If it is present, he said, "We're trying to confirm that it can be cleaned up."

Dix said cleanup "may be as simple as venting it into the atmosphere."

IEPA's Hornshaw said venting would require a special permit.

If the IEPA finds that chemicals are present in large enough quantities or are terribly expensive to clean up, QuikTrip would probably try to renegotiate with the owners of all the parcels on the block, Dix said. Ray Korte of QuikTrip said there are about 16 owners.

Dix said the sale would not be completed until the type of chemicals and the method of disposal had been determined. Miller said the IEPA would have the test results in about one month.

Dunbar future unclear

VENICE-MADISON — For more than two years, a community group has been unable to get the ball rolling on a proposed rehabilitation of the old Dunbar School in Venice and Madison.

Meanwhile, vandals and burglars have turned it into an eyesore and a health hazard by breaking its windows and doors and looting it for metals, officials said.

The group, Concerned Citizens Inc., has been unable to arrange a financial plan with the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development.

But a local industry, which prefers not to be identified, is stepping in and providing the group with 90 4-by-8-foot pieces of corrugated sheet metal to secure the building.

Riverboat gambling gets smooth sailing

By Steve Horrell
Staff writer

SAUGET — If the proposed riverboat gambling bill gets anywhere near as warm a reception in the Illinois Legislature as it did at Monday's public hearing here, it's going to be smooth sailing when the bill is considered in the fall veto session later this month.

The bill got a hearty endorsement from local mayors in attendance. But unlike previous hearings already held around the state — in Alton, Rock Island, Joliet and Peoria — the two dozen people in attendance at Sauget Village Hall was considered a small turnout.

This gathering was decidedly in favor of riverboat gambling in contrast to the Alton meeting, where religious groups and other opponents spearheaded a drive, collecting petition signatures against the bill.

"My experience in life teaches me that people are going to gamble, even if some forms are illegal," said Sauget Mayor Paul Sauget. "It is therefore proper and practical, in my opinion, to give them an opportunity to do so in a setting which has been legalized and is regulated and controlled by the state and from which the state derives additional revenues."

The bill's chief proponent, Rep. Denny Jacobs, D-East Moline, has said that the five cities awarded licenses in 1990, should the bill pass, could share in almost $28 million from wagering taxes and admission fees charged to each gambling ship passenger. The bill calls for five cities to receive licenses next year, with five more cities being added in 1991.

Revenue projections are based on assumptions that each boat would hold 1,200 passengers and maintain a 90 percent occupancy rate. The estimate, he said, also assumes that each passenger would bet the $500 limit during a four-hour cruise.

"I can say that I am 100 percent for riverboat gambling," said Centreville Mayor Riley Owens. "It would be a catalyst to the east side of the river."

Owens' endorsement was echoed by East Carondelet Mayor Herb Simmons.

East St. Louis Mayor Carl Officer also offered his support, but not without some reservations.

"I am as yet undecided about whether riverboat gambling is a major solution to Illinois' economic woes," Officer said. "It is my fervent belief that when the state moved into the lottery business a few years ago, there were some real questions about whether those dollars went where they should have gone."

Officer voiced concern about whether money from riverboat gambling would benefit the educational system. District 189 teachers began the first day of a strike Monday.

Officer suggested that the Legislature consider "stationary casino gambling," which he said would help raise additional money for those cities involved.

Monday night's meeting was the last in a series of statewide public hearings. It was added to

Neighborhood fired up

Three house fires in 10 days in the 2100 block of Ohio Avenue have Wanetta Mercer worried. Shortly after midnight on Sept. 17, a fire of suspicious origin started in a two-story house at 2131 Ohio, spreading to a home at 2133 Ohio. Both buildings were destroyed. The two are separated from Mercer's home by a vacant lot. Then, on Sept. 26 at 3:58 p.m., a one-story house at 2139 Ohio owned by James Hogan was found enveloped by flames. The initial investigation of the fire at 2131 Ohio was completed by local officials last week and the case was turned over to the state fire marshal. The origin of both fires is suspicious, according to fire officials.

Police officers try 'four 10s'

Individual policemen will be out on the streets longer, but less often, under a trial scheduling plan approved Sept. 26 by the City Council. Starting Oct. 2, officers are working "four 10s" — a work week that consists of four 10-hour days. The trial period will end at midnight Nov. 30. The plan was suggested by the police officers. Police Chief Don Knight said he hoped the plan would cut down on overtime and on pay for shift differential.

The band will perform in Macy's Thanksgiving Day parade in New York City and at other events during the year.

Hurricane funds being raised here

GRANITE CITY — Here in the Midwest, when folks think of natural disasters, they think mostly in terms of tornadoes, fires and snowstorms. Being hundreds of miles away from seaside coastlines, Midwesterners don't worry much about the possible devastating effects of a hurricane. Most, that is.

Members of the Tri-City Chapter of the American Red Cross, encompassing Granite City, Madison, Venice, Mitchell and Pontoon Beach, have been concerned with the effects of Hurricane Hugo since even before it struck several Carribbean countries and the South Carolina coast. To date, more than 300 tons of relief supplies have been sent from Red Cross groups to the places damaged by Hugo.

Now, the Tri-City Chapter is appealing to local residents to come forward with what Hugo's victims need the most: money to Return to tradition: Dance without denim

By Meg Tebo
Staff writer

GRANITE CITY — Put on your dancing shoes, boys and girls. And while you're at it, dig way back in your closet and find something other than jeans to wear. (Come on, you've got something in there!)

For the first time in a long time, Granite City High School's Homecoming dance will be a semi-formal affair. The Student Council will handle decorations and other arrangements for the Oct. 21 event in the school gym from 8 to 11 p.m. Finger sandwiches and punch will be served and music will be provided by Pyramid Productions, a professional DJ service. A professional photographer will be on hand to take individual and group shots of attendees.

At least 500 students are expected to attend, according to student council sponsor Steve Hamilton.

"We had a Sweetheart dance last February as a sort of trial-run for this, and it was an overwhelming success. We expect even more from this one," said Hamilton.

Students need not have a date in order to attend the dance, Hamilton added.

"One thing we will be watching, though, is that the dress code will be strictly enforced. There will be absolutely no denim allowed," Hamilton said.

Girls should plan to wear a dress or skirt and boys must wear dress slacks with a sweater or tie, Hamilton said.

Past graduates are also eligible to attend, but everyone, including both present and former students, must purchase a $5 ticket at the school office by Oct. 6.

The dance will be chaperoned by teachers, administrators and their spouses, Hamilton said.

Fistfight leads to lockdown

By John Milazzo
Staff writer

EDWARDSVILLE — A lockdown was imposed at the Madison County Juvenile Detention Home in Edwardsville Friday morning after a crudely fashioned weapon was discovered in the wake of a fistfight involving about a half-dozen youths.

Both Madison County deputies and Edwardsville police officers searched for weapons at the home after authorities were summoned to the facility by detention home staff.

Robert Astorian, Madison County director of probation and court services, said the search produced no additional weapons.

Astorian said home staff members found a "checker chip" from a board game that had been honed to a sharp edge and was wrapped on one side with paper. "It looked as though it had been rubbed on concrete to get the edge and might do some scratching or gouging. But it was flexible and I doubt that it could have done much damage," Astorian said.

While no one was apparently injured by the weapon in the brawl, one 15-year-old was taken to Anderson Hospital in Maryville complaining of stomach pains after being struck.

The youth was examined and released, according to Astorian. The lockdown lasted through Saturday.

He said the home is presently at its 21-person capacity and that the fight was apparently racially motivated.

"It started at about 10:30 a.m. between a black youth and a white youth. Once it began, several others joined in," Astorian said, although the remainder of the youths, all boys, "stayed clear of the fighting."

Astorian said that, following the incident, Steve Bowker, the superintendent of the home, was summoned back to Edwardsville from a juvenile justice seminar he was attending in Bloomington.

The lockdown was imposed as a means of "letting tempers cool down and to give the staff a chance to determine how it started and who was at fault," Astorian said.

All of the youths presently in the home are under the age of 16. There is also one girl now being detained at the home. She was in court Friday morning and did not witness the fight, Astorian said.

Drug commission would provide motivation for all, Westfall says

By Jack Cowan
Staff writer

ST. LOUIS — A St. Louis County Drug Commission would act as a catalyst to involve business, civic, labor and educational leaders in combating alcohol and drug abuse, County Prosecutor George R. "Buzz" Westfall said Friday.

Westfall is proposing that County Executive Gene McNary and the County Council form a commission of law enforcement officials, government leaders, clergy and educators to help start education and drug treatment programs as well as recommend possible financing sources for the programs.

"The commission should bring together the best minds and biggest hearts in the county to help find solutions to the drug epidemic," Westfall said. "The commission has to pull people from inside and outside county government to look at what needs to be done, what can be accomplished and how it can be done."

McNary said Friday it is too soon to decide if he will recommend to the council the formation of a drug commission.

In proposing the commission, Westfall also offered suggestions to improve efforts within county government in the fight against drugs.

Westfall suggested:

- The county provide drug- and alcohol-treatment programs for juveniles in detention. The county previously had a treatment program for juveniles through a federal grant, but the program ended about four years ago, said Kenneth M. Hensiek, the county's chief juvenile officer. The county has applied for an additional federal grant for a treatment program, he said.

Chemical dependency programs are available for inmates serving sentences in the county's jail annex in Chesterfield and at the Lakeside Center for Youths in west county, Westfall said.

- St. Louis Regional Medical Center, which is operated jointly by the county and the City of St. Louis, enact in-patient or out-patient drug programs.

"Perhaps the major health threat to the poor of St. Louis is drug and alcohol abuse," Westfall said. "The medical center needs to address this issue."

- County government should offer alcohol and drug education referals to county employees seeking help.

- The county Department of Community Health and Medical Care should offer drug- and alcohol-education programs. Westfall said the department is interested in starting a preventive education program for county school. Most of the programs probably could be offered using existing personnel and volunteers.

"If money is needed for programs, I'm hoping that would come from civic contributions," he said.

Maritz Inc., Schnuck Markets Inc. and Dierbergs Markets Inc. have programs to provide money for education, Westfall said.

"Obviously, if companies are doing something for schools, those types of companies should be interested in drug educations programs," Westfall said.

Woidtke gets 45 years for killing paper intern

By Rick Arnold
Staff writer

BELLEVILLE — Still maintaining his innocence, Rodney Woidtke was sentenced to 45 years in prison Thursday for the murder of Audrey Cardenas.

"I'm sorry that she's dead, but I didn't have anything to do with it, believe me," Woidtke told Associate Judge Richard Aguirre before Aguirre imposed his sentence at Thursday's hearing.

Woidtke, 29, of Bakersfield, Calif., faced a maximum prison sentence of 60 years for the June 1988 murder of Cardenas, a 24-year-old editorial intern with the Belleville News-Democrat. Cardenas had been missing for a week when her body was found in a dry creek bed behind Belleville East High School on June 26, 1988.

Prior to sentencing Woidtke, Aguirre had denied a post-trial motion by Woidtke's attorney, public defender Brian Trentman, for either a new trial or a reversal of the guilty verdict.

At Trentman's request, Aguirre took one year off of Woidtke's sentence for the year that he spent in the St. Clair County Jail, from the time of his arrest in June 1988 until now. Woidtke will stay at the jail until the Illinois Department of Corrections decides where Woidtke will serve his sentence.

Under Illinois law, a person is eligible for parole after serving half of his sentence. In this case, Woidtke will be eligible for parole in 22 years.

After Aguirre announced his ruling, Trentman said that he would be filing an appeal with the Illinois 5th District Court in Mount Vernon. Trentman also said that he was withdrawing from the case and asked that an appellate defender be assigned to the case.

Outside the courtroom after the hearing, Trentman told reporters that he still believes there's a reasonable doubt that Woidtke killed Cardenas, but he wouldn't go as far to say that he believed Woidtke was innocent.

"I'm not God, I can't say for sure whether he did it or not," Trentman said. But St. Clair County Assistant State's Attorney Scott Mansfield, who prosecuted the case, told reporters he was sure about Woidtke's guilt.

"I spent about a year with the case, I'm sure Rodney is the killer," Mansfield said. He termed Woidtke's sentence "fair and adequate."

Mansfield's boss, State's Attorney John Baricevic, declined to directly comment on the sentence.

"Aguirre's a good judge. I'm sure he thought about it long and hard," Baricevic said.

Woidtke didn't testify at his four-day trial, which ended on Aug. 25 in his conviction on a first-degree murder charge.

> "I'm sorry that she's dead, but I didn't have anything to do with it, believe me."
> —Rodney Woidtke, in plea before Associate Judge Richard Aguirre

Speaking in a barely audible voice and clad in an orange jail jumpsuit, Woidtke told Aguirre that he was not capable of killing Cardenas.

"I'm not guilty, I'm not a violent person," he said. "I can't prove anything because I don't have an alibi. I was sleeping in the woods. I just want to say I'm not guilty."

But in announcing his ruling, Aguirre said he put more stock in Woidtke's confessions to police officers, which were used as evidence during the trial, than he did in Woidtke's statements to him.

"He (Woidtke) showed her (Cardenas) no mercy," Aguirre said. "He left her in a ditch, shorn of her clothing, to die a slow death."

Aguirre said he didn't sentence Woidtke to a maximum prison term because of Woidtke's lack of a prior criminal record and because Woidtke's freedom to roam the streets was largely due to a April 1988 court order releasing him from the Alton Mental Health Center, despite the fact that he was mentally ill.

The fact that Woidtke has been diagnosed as mentally ill, suffering from paranoid schizophrenia, was one reason that he should have received the maximum sentence, argued Mansfield.

"I think the maximum sentence should be imposed for two reasons: to punish Rodney Woidtke and to protect the public from Rodney Woidtke," Mansfield said. "Rodney has been convicted of the murder of an innocent, truly innocent, girl. Audrey cannot come back. Audrey is gone."

Mansfield added that a maximum sentence would deter other "like-minded individuals" from committing similar crimes.

In his argument for the minimum sentence of 20 years for Woidtke, Trentman blasted Mansfield's claim that a maximum sentence would be a deterrence.

"If we're going to punish Rodney, than we better get everyone else who has a mental illness and lock them up for the maximum period of time, so they don't harm society," Trentman said.

Cable aids hurricane victims

The company that runs the local cable TV system, Cencom, has sent two of its technicians to South Carolina to help restring cable wires torn down by Hurricane Hugo's 125-mph winds.

Randy Smith, production coordinator for Cencom in Maryville, said the Cencom system in Camden, S.C., near Charleston, was 75-percent destroyed. The Camden system requested help from all other Cencom systems.

Smith said Darrell Richards of Highland and Brian Cope of Freeburg webt to Camden on Friday and will be there at least one week.

Heins named editorial director

A. Edward Heins, associate professor of journalism at the University of Missouri-Columbia, has been appointed editorial director of the Suburban Journals of Greater St. Louis, Thomas Marschel, president and chief executive officer of the Journals, announced Monday.

Heins, 58, has taught at the university for the past 10 years. For the past five years he also has served as general manager for the Columbia Missourian, a daily commercial, community newspaper published by the university's School of Journalism.

Prior to his association with the University of Missouri, Heins was publisher, executive vice president and part owner of Concord Publishing House Inc. in Cape Girardeau, which published the Bulletin-Journal, a three- days-per-week, free community newspaper. That paper eventually purchased the daily Southeast Missourian.

The publishing house also began a similar paper in Sikeston, Mo., which recently merged with the daily Sikeston Standard.

Before coming to Missouri, Heins worked for more than 11 years at the statewide daily Des Moines (Iowa) Register and Tribune, where he was a reporter, assistant managing editor and managing editor for five years.

"We are extremely pleased to have Ed Heins as editorial director of the Suburban Journals," Marschel said. "He brings to the position outstanding credentials both from his 10 years of leadership in journalism education at the University of Missouri and his lifetime of dedication to community newspapers."

Reflecting on his new assignment, Heins said: "I've worked for major civic papers and community newspapers with less than daily frequency. I feel that less-than-daily papers in large cities are going to be particularly strong in the coming years.

"The Suburban Journals in St. Louis provide the best less-than-daily coverage of newspapers in any big city. I believe that with the addition of the new newspaper (the St. Louis Sun), St. Louis will be an exciting market to be in and it behooves the Journals to be even better in the future. I hope to help that happen."

Heins and his wife, Audrey, are the parents of three grown children.

Old Newsboys funds available

Children's agencies that wish to be considered for funding from the 1989 Suburban Journals Old Newsboys Drive on Nov. 16 have two more days in which to submit applications.

The deadline for filing applications is Friday, Oct. 6.

Agencies wishing to apply should contact the Suburban Journals at (314) 821-0211 for an application form.

In 1988, a record $270,040 was raised through the sale of the special edition of the Journals. Every penny was contributed to nearly 300 children's charities throughout the St. Louis bi-state area.

Old Newsboys Day was begun in 1957. In the last 32 years, more than $4.1 million has been raised for children's charities.

Costello staff costs reported to be less

By Jason Moody
Staff writer

WASHINGTON — After being cited among Congress's top 10 spenders for the first quarter of this year, Rep. Jerry Costello has greatly reduced his office and staff expenses, according to new House records.

In the period covering Jan. 1 and March 31, Costello, of Belleville, spent $172,634.42 for salaries, travel and equipment, placing him among the top 2.3 percent in House spending and the highest in the Illinois delegation.

However, House records show Costello, a Democrat, reduced office expenditures by 28 percent last quarter, with $124,136.24 in spending, placing him in the bottom 14 percent among active House members.

Only one member in the Illinois delegation, Rep. Sidney Yates, D-Chicago, spent less last quarter, with $113,769.76 in office expenses.

However, there was no conscious effort to reduce office outlays in the office, according to Costello's spokesman, Brian Lott.

"Many of the expenses listed in the first quarter were actually carryovers from 1988," Lott said. "That made the figure look artificially high."

According to Lott, Costello's predecessor, the late Melvin Price, left behind very little in the way of office equipment.

"He left us with three electric typewriters, no FAX machine, no computer system ... we had to make a number of big first-time purchases," Lott said.

House records confirm that Costello has kept expenses for salaries, travel, and rent relatively constant this year while making deep cuts in outlays on equipment last quarter.

Illinois' two other first year members, Rep. George Sangmeister, D-Mokena, and Rep. Glenn Poshard, D-Carterville, spent 136,265.16 and $135,001.73 respectively, last quarter.

House and Senate members are allocated a set amount of funds each year for government expenses, but many make a point of returning the unused portion to the government.

SEMC offers AHA teleconferences

St. Elizabeth Medical Center in Granite City will be providing American Hospital Association teleconferences beginning January 1990.

They are being offered for other health-care providers as well as SEMC associates.

"It will be like a workshop including people from other medical facilities with a variety of backgrounds," said Donna Fisher, SEMC Education Resources director. "Primarily, the teleconferences will explain new concepts and technology.

"We began holding AHA teleconferences for associates in 1986. Now we will be able to provide a variety of up-to-date topics for other health-care providers as well as our associates."

Some of the topics for 1990 will include: chemical waste management and making hospitals more hospitable for older adults.

Currently, there are only two St. Louis area hospitals which provide open AHA conferences.

Attitudes are revealed

The Illinois Health Care Association (IHCA) has announced the results of a survey on the elderly's attitudes toward long-term facilities.

"Illinois' growing elderly population is becoming more vocal in demanding high-quality nursing home care," said IHCA Executive Director William L. Kempiners. "And when you consider that the Illinois Medicaid Program has one of the lowest nursing home reimbursement rates in the nation, it's ever-challenging for our members to continue providing quality care."

The survey, taken during the 1989 Illinois State Fair, showed that 89 percent of the respondents had visited a nursing home, and 76 percent were unaware that Illinois had one of the nation's lowest nursing home cost reimbursement rates. Sixty-eight percent were unaware that nursing homes are more regulated than hospitals.

When asked to select the most important factor in choosing a nursing home, 64 percent indicated quality nursing care, while 18 percent selected cleanliness.

Gateway Program looks for older people in need

Director Janet S. Otwell of the Illinois Department on Aging has announced that the Gatekeeper Program, which trains customer-contact employees to be on the lookout for older people who need help, has expanded statewide and now involves the major gas and electric utilities in the state.

"Although the Gatekeeper Program operates in most of the 50 states, Illinois is one of the few states to offer the program in each and every country," said Otwell. "Over 6,500 employees working for these utilities have now been trained as Gatekeepers, acting as eyes and ears to local agencies serving older people."

Those utilities currently participating in the effort include the Central Illinois Public Service Co., Illinois Power, Union Electric, Northern Illinois Gas, Commonwealth Edison, and several Illinois Electric Cooperatives. Peoples Gas is expected to become involved this fall.

Gatekeeper referrals have resulted in older people being connected with local service agencies that provide assistance with finances, household chores, meal preparation, personal care, home-delivered meals and transportation.

Information about the program can be obtained by calling the Illinois Department on Aging toll-free at 1-800-252-8966.

Respiratory care future looks bright, experts say

The Respiratory Care Training Program, co-sponsored by St. Elizabeth Medical Center and Belleville Area College, offers a bright future for area students, according to local officials.

"We had 15 students who graduated from our program in 1989. All 15 of them are now working in the respiratory care profession," said Will Mueller, registered respiratory therapist and SEMC respiratory care training program director.

"The demand for respiratory professionals is great. Job prospects are very good for respiratory care professionals not only in our immediate area, but on a national scale as well."

According to Mueller, respiratory care practitioners can pursue a variety of careers. In addition to general respiratory care, they may work in: specialty programs, such as critical care or pediatrics/neonatology; pulmonary diagnostics; rehabilitation programs; home health care companies; medical equipment sales; education; and research.

"Our program graduates have consistently achieved a substantially higher success rate on the national board exam than the national average," Mueller said. "A very high number of them also go on to pursue higher levels of education, specialty positions and management positions in respiratory care."

The SEMC program has graduates working all over the United States. One graduate is currently working in Saudi Arabia.

"In my two years as program director, I have tried to encourage open communication with other areas of the country," Mueller said. "This gives our graduates a lot more opportunities to work in different geographical areas. We want our graduates to be aware of the opportunities open to them."

The 11-month program, which accepts 33 students per year, offers a full range of courses covering all aspects of respiratory therapy including the study of heart and lung pathology (disease), patient assessment, pharmacology, diagnostic procedures and various methods of treatment and rehabilitation of patients suffering from lung problems.

Students also receive extensive training in the theory, application and troubleshooting of life support equipment. College credit is conferred for all the training received.

"It is a very intensive 11 months," said Debbie Rapien, clinical coordinator.

"Students receive extensive clinical training at SEMC, and at five other area hospitals. The students who complete the program should be very proud of themselves. They have demonstrated their endurance and capability. We know that we can trust them to do their jobs well. The time spent in the 11-month training curriculum is roughly equally to three years of college training."

Although the program recently received a five-year full and unconditional accreditation from the American Medical Association, Mueller still has goals he would like to achieve.

"I want to continue to refine the curriculum, to keep up with trends and changes in the employment market," he said.

Because of changes in insurance coverage and the desire of more patients to remain in their homes, respiratory care outside the traditional hospital setting is a growing area.

"Also, changes in health care reimbursement have made it essential that respiratory professionals can communicate well with their fellow health-care professionals to insure effective and safe patient care," Mueller said. "We will be emphasizing communication skills more and more, as health care technology becomes more complex."

Traditional respiratory care programs focused on theory and technical training. In modern health-care settings, other skills are also needed.

"We are also emphasizing judgment and decision-making skills," Mueller said. "These skills are as essential as the technical skills we teach."

For program graduates who are interested in the next educational step, becoming a registered respiratory therapist, the program has an agreement with the University of Missouri.

"Graduates from our program are able to go into the respiratory therapy program offered by the University of Missouri, at St. John's Mercy, with full credit for all the courses they completed here," Mueller said.

"This will make it easier for our graduates to pursue higher levels of education."

If any SEMC associates are interested in studying respiratory care or know someone who is interested, Mueller will be glad to meet and talk with them at their convenience.

"A lot of our students have previous medical backgrounds. They may have worked in a health-care institution, but not found their niche," Mueller said.

"I want them to know that respiratory care is a career that can be built on through specialization or further education. We would like associates to be aware of the opportunities our program offers."

Sen. Dixon nominates Chinese demonstrators for Nobel Peace Prize

WASHINGTON — Sen. Alan J. Dixon, Majority Chief Deputy Whip, has signed a letter to the Nobel Committee nominating the pro-democracy demonstrators in China as recipients of the 1989 Nobel Prize for Peace.

Nominated, in the letter from members of the United States Senate, were "both those who have fallen in their struggle for freedom and those who are now incarcerated or in hiding for expressing their beliefs in self-determination and liberty for all."

The letter said, "We must not forget these brave men and women, nor the cause for which they sacrificed their educations, their futures and their lives. The ideals for which the demonstrators struggled will live on. So must the memory of their noble fight. For weeks they captured the hearts of the world with their determination and resolve to fight the peaceful fight. Now it is our turn to capture the memory of their struggle forever by awarding these courageous souls the Nobel Prize for peace."

The letter, which has received bipartisan support, is currently being circulated among members of the Senate for signatures.

Dixon also authorized legislation that would rename the park across from the Chinese Embassy in Washington, D.C., Tiananmen Square Memorial Park.

Bush's Gephardt comments don't stay private too long

By Edward T. Hearn
Staff writer

WASHINGTON — President George Bush caused a minor stir Thursday when comments he thought he was making in private about House Majority Leader Richard A. Gephardt actually were being captured by a clutch of Capitol Hill reporters.

Bush, unaware he was talking on an open telephone line to U.S. Rep. Bill Archer of Texas, said he is not happy with the St. Louis Democrat's comments on the House floor that the capital gains tax cut would benefit only the rich.

Bush said: "I tell you, I am displeased with Gephardt with the way he made it so, really, kind of personal."

At which point, sensing potential trouble, Archer alerted Bush to the fact that the press corps was hovering nearby.

"Mr. President, I must tell you I'm in the press gallery right now with a whole lot of reporters so I think you should be alerted to that fact," Archer said.

Bush said: "Just so they can hear you and not me."

Archer said: "Well, I'm afraid they are hearing you, too."

The call soon ended, with Bush signing off with a "well done" to Archer.

Gephardt, who arrived in the same studio an hour or so later, heard a tape of Bush's remarks and was asked to comment.

Gephardt took it all in stride, saying: "Maybe (Bush) didn't understand what I was saying in my speech. I like the president and I wish him well. He's my president as he is yours."

Bush placed the call from Charlottesville, Va., and interrupted Archer in the middle of a press briefing after the 239-190 victory to cut capital gains by 30 percent.

Archer, a key Bush ally who helped spearhead the GOP effort in the House, took the call in the House television studio, which was packed with reporters, live microphones and rolling cameras.

Archer agreed to use a speaker phone so his exchange with Bush could be overheard. Only one problem: Archer failed to tell Bush at the outset who also was listening.

Following a brief exchange, Bush asked Archer how the House leadership was responding to their defeat and then offered his view of Gephardt's performance.

Brewery rejects Schoemehl; won't build downtown arena

By Joe Holleman
Staff writer

GRANITE CITY — Officials at Anheuser-Busch Cos. turned back Mayor Vince Schoemehl's compromise offer aimed at getting the brewery to build a downtown arena.

In a letter to Schoemehl dated Sept. 29, Fred L. Kuhlman, chairman of Civic Center Corp., an A-B subsidiary, said, "...we have now decided definitely and finally to withdraw from the arena project. Since we initially submitted our proposal, a number of circumstances have occurred which have reversed our original interest in this project."

On Thursday, Anheuser-Busch acquired six theme parks, including the four Sea World parks, and other land holdings from Harcourt Brace Jovanovich Inc. for $1.1 billion.

Schoemehl's compromise effort sprung from his refusal in July to allow the brewery to demolish the Cupples Station complex near Busch Stadium to build the arena for the St. Louis Blues hockey club. Cupples Station consists of 10 warehouses that some preservationists classified as significant architectural buildings.

Schoemehl said Tuesday he would allow the brewery to tear down the five warehouses located closest to Busch Stadium, but save the other five for redevelopment.

In a prepared statement released Sept. 29, Schoemehl said, "I respect their decision and we must now proceed to develop an arena through alternative methods."

In early September, 11 groups expressed interest to the city about developing a downtown arena. One of the groups includes Michael F. Shanahan, chairman of the Blues. Schoemehl said the city now will pursue those interests.

"The key to a downtown arena is an anchor tenant, and the St. Louis Blues provide that," Schoemehl said. "I have spoken with Mike Shanahan and he's still enthusiastic about building an arena downtown."

City development officials now will review the groups' credentials and ask for specific construction proposals, the mayor said, adding that the process could begin by Oct. 15.

Schoemehl said his compromise of tearing down five Cupples warehouses is not automatically available to the other developers.

"We're going to deal with Cupples Station as entirely separate from the arena," he said. "If the developers say that (Cupples demolition) is the only way it can be done, then we'll either accept or reject their offer at that time.

"But right now, I can't say we're going to save all of them, or none of them."

Aldermanic President Thomas A. Villa, who sharply criticized Schoemehl for refusing to allow Cupples to be demolished, said the brewery's response came as no surprize.

"Civic Center did not enter into this haphazardly," Villa said. "They wanted to be the developer for the entire 14 acres and they were well-prepared. So their refusing to compromise doesn't surprise me at all."

Villa said the mayor's "attempt to save face" was too late.

"That face was obliterated a month ago," he said.

Cruise ships modify some routes due to Hugo's fury

By Deborah Reinhardt
Journal Staff Writer

Hurricane Hugo, the killer storm that recently passed through the Caribbean, made few waves for cruise ships. Cruise lines with ships based in San Juan, Puerto Rico, last week reported only minor itinerary changes and said operations would return to normal this week.

Royal Caribbean Cruise Line had the 726-passenger Sun Viking in the Caribbean when Hugo was heading for Puerto Rico. Sun Viking sails every Sunday from San Juan on eight- and 10-day Caribbean itineraries.

"Because Hugo and our passengers were supposed to arrive (in San Juan) at the same time, we came back a day early," said Rich Steck, public relations director for Royal Caribbean Cruise Line. The 450 passengers on board disembarked Sept. 16 and the line made arrangements to get the travelers off the island before the storm hit.

Hugo rammed into Puerto Rico on Sept. 18 with winds up to 125 mph.

Steck said after passengers left the Sun Viking, the ship went about 150 miles southwest of the island and waited until Hugo passed. The Sept. 17 sailing then was canceled.

Passengers were offered refunds or a chance to reschedule between now and Dec. 10 plus a 25 percent discount on another Royal Caribbean cruise, Steck said. Although the line's office has received many calls about upcoming cruises in the Caribbean, no cancellations by consumers were reported.

"They trust we don't want to give them a bad experience," Steck said.

As of this writing, the Sun Viking was set to go out Sept. 24 to resume its Caribbean schedule. Steck said the line was sending employees to assess the damage to Puerto Rico and other islands hit by the storm. He said the ship instead of calling at Guadeloupe, the French island damaged by Hugo, probably would go to Martinique, another French island.

It seems that San Juan will be ready to welcome the cruise ships back.

"Our initial information said it (the cruise terminal in Puerto Rico) was OK but we're investigating that," Steck said.

Cunard Cruise Line, which has the Countess in San Juan year-round, also reported little changes because of the storm.

While Hugo threatened the Caribbean, the 750-passenger Countess skipped Tortola, St. Maarten and Guadeloupe and arrived Sept. 18 at Martinique, said Susan Alpert, public relations director for Cunard. The ship was scheduled to return to San Juan on Sept. 23.

"We'll be maintaining all our ship's Caribbean itineraries," Alpert said. In addition to the Countess, Cunard's Sagafjord and Queen Elizabeth 2 sails the Caribbean a few times each year.

Cruise giant Carnival brought the Festivale back to San Juan on Sept. 16, a day earlier than scheduled. Jennifer Foley, Carnival spokesman, said the cruise line put passengers on planes to make sure they could get off the island before the storm hit. The 38,000-ton Festivale then headed to Virginia for its regularly-scheduled dry dock refurbishing.

The other Carnival ship in the Bahamas, Carnivale, had a minor itinerary change, and the Celebration, which sails the Eastern Caribbean on seven-day cruises, visited the Western Caribbean while Hugo was in the vicinity.

Foley did not know if the Carnival office has received many consumers calls. But she said the Caribbean ships, including the Festivale based in San Juan, will return to Puerto Rico and St. Thomas, U.S. Virgin Islands, this week. The ship also calls at St. Maarten, Barbados and Martinique during seven-day cruises. She said Carnival's contacts in those ports said it would be safe, although the line had not made final decisions.

"We don't intend to cancel any of the cruises in coming weeks," Foley said. "The deviations, if we have to make any, will be relatively minor."

Steck said many cruise lines handle hurricane season—September is the worst month—by putting ships in wet or dry dock for repairs. Royal Caribbean's flagship, Sovereign of the Seas, last week was getting a new casino. Song of Norway last week was finishing a spruce up in Virginia. Song of Norway and Sovereign of the Seas sail year-round in the Caribbean.

Carnival's Jubilee and Celebration were in dry dock when Hugo plowed through the Caribbean, Foley said. The Jubilee was to resume service on Sept. 23. Carnival's Festivale will go out Oct. 8 and the Mardi Gras, which offers short Bahamian cruises from Fort Lauderdale, Fla., will resume service Oct. 1.

Passengers planning a Caribbean cruise this month may want to check with their travel agent or call the cruise line to get updated information on itinerary changes due to bad weather.

Contact Royal Caribbean at 800-327-2056, Cunard at 800-223-0764 and Carnival at 800-327-7373. Other lines with ships in the Caribbean include: Holland America Line, 206-281-3535; Costa Cruises, 305-358-7325; Norwegian Caribbean Line, 305-447-9660; and Princess Cruises, 213-553-1770.

Jamaica prepares for record winter season

By Deborah Reinhardt
Journal Staff Writer

As news about Hurricane Hugo's onslaught is being splashed all over newspaper pages and television screens, Jamaicans certainly can empathize with the victims of Hugo. Although Jamaica has remained unscathed this time around, on Sept. 12, 1988, Hurricane Gilbert stormed through Jamaica.

But the island has made a strong comeback from Gilbert's attack, thanks to islanders who banned together to put their homeland on its feet in time for the busy fall and winter season last year. As Jamaica readies for the tourism push this year, officials say the island will have additional hotel rooms, special events and increased air service to accommodate an expected increase in visitors.

The Jamaica Tourist Board in New York projects the fall and winter season will be the best ever. The office reported that June arrivals increased 19 percent above those in June 1988, while July gains were 14 percent above July 1988. August probably will see healthy numbers because of one of its most popular events, Sunsplash '89, a reggae music festival that ran from Aug. 15 through 19 in Montego Bay.

Visitors may stay in new or renovated properties. Although 1,500 new hotel rooms will be available by the end of 1990, 1,170 will be ready for fall and winter 1989. Sandals Royal Caribbean resort in Montego Bay is adding 20 rooms and the Tryall Golf and Beach Club will open 20 new suites for the winter season.

The island's first two all-suite resorts will open in Negril. November openings are planned for Swept Away and SuperClub's 200-suite Grand Lido.

However, not all properties in Jamaica are expanding. The Eden II all-couples resort, owned by Savoy Resorts, closed Aug. 1 when that company filed for bankruptcy. The property near Ocho Rios, which was purchased by Life of Jamaica, an insurance company on the island, is closed for renovations. A reopening date has not been set. But a spokesman for Jamaica tourism said Sandals, another company that owns resorts on the island, is under contract to operate the old Eden II.

Air service to Jamaica from such gateways as Miami, Newark, N.J. and Tampa, Fla. has been increased this year by American Airlines, Northwest and Continental.

Illiteracy campaign gets boost

By Jason Moody
Staff writer

WASHINGTON — Sen. Paul Simon's seven-year crusade to end adult illiteracy may have been given its most important lift ever recently when the Democratic leadership included it as a major component in its new education package.

At a press conference with House Majority Leader Richard Gephardt of Missouri and Senator Majority Leader George Mitchell of Maine, Congressional Democrats unveiled six goals "to reinvigorate the American partnership in education" as a prelude to President George Bush's "education summit" with the nation's governors.

Simon's Adult Illiteracy Elimination Act — a $300 million proposal to reach an estimated 23 to 27 million illiterate adults in the United States — was cited as a key component in Demdcrat's education package.

Speaking before The American Speech-Language-Hearing Association just hours after the leadership's press conference, Simon, D-Ill., said ending illiteracy was key if America was to face the problem of unemployment" and "remain competitive".

Simon also said Bush's proposed $422 million in additional education spending was "just a drop in the bucket," adding that "if this becomes just another public relations fight then not only do Democrats and Republican lose, all of us lose."

Simon's fight against adult illiteracy began in 1982 when, as chairman of the House Subcommittee on Higher Education, he organized Congress' first extensive probe into the matter.

In 1986, Simon sponsored legislation creating the Literacy Corps program, which calls for volunteers to work with local literacy programs tutoring and recruiting other volunteers.

But the Illinois Democrat's latest proposal, which calls upon the federal government to strengthen existing literacy programs at the state, local and private sector, is probably his most ambitious ever.

It has yet to pass in either the House or Senate.

According to Simon, the federal government's major literacy program, Adult Basic Education, serves only 10 percent of eligible participants, while all other public and private programs combined reach an additional 9 percent of those who need help.

Simon has cited statistics showing 10 percent of white adults, 44 percent of blacks and 45 percent of Hispanics as functionally illiterate.

Jeanne Chall, a Harvard University professor of psychology and director of the Harvard Reading Laboratory, said most adult illiterates suffer from a learning disability.

"There is currently very little knowledge about how to approach the problem of adult illiteracy," added Chall, who attended Simon's press conference before the ASHA.

She said it was unfortunate that Simon's bill provided no funds for research in the area.

the list at the request of Sen. Ken Hall and Rep. Wyvetter Younge, both Democrats from East St. Louis.

Experts from both sides of the issue will be called to Springfield within the next few weeks for final testimony.

Iowa passed a riverboat gambling bill in the spring. The Illinois Senate gave its approval in the spring, but the proposal was voted down by the House. It will be reintroduced at the fall veto session which begins Oct. 17.

"I don't know that we will gain a lot by the gambling itself," said Rep. Monroe Flinn, D-Cahokia. "But we have a whole lot to gain by attracting people to the St. Louis area. There's a whole lot to see in this area — Busch Stadium in St. Louis, the Cahokia Mounds, the historical sites here in Cahokia that people never come to visit — and I think this will be one of the attractions to the area. It should increase tourism tremendously."

The Tri-City Chapter is hoping to raise about $6,000, according to Chapter Manager Ron Streiler. The total fund-raising effort by the American Red Cross is expected to top $30 million.

"We're appealing to churches and individuals to donate whatever they can," said Streiler.

Those wishing to contribute to the Hurricane Hugo financial relief effort may contact the Tri-City Chapter of the American Red Cross in Granite City.

Bills propose ASL credits

High school students will receive foreign language credit for learning American Sign Language under one of a series of bills that relate to people with disabilities signed this month by Gov. James R. Thompson.

HB 2076, sponsored by Rep. Jack Kubik, R-Forest Park, amends the School Code to provide foreign language credit for courses or proficiency in American Sign Language.

"Incentives to learn sign language will make communities more accessible to people with hearing impairments, and promote 'mainstreaming' — both academically and socially — through better communication between deaf and hearing students in local school districts," Bradley said. "It will also increase the number of qualified interpreters."

County voter deadline set

County Clerk Evelyn Bowles has announced that Oct. 10 is the last day for voters to register, re-register, or report a change of address in order to qualify to vote in the Nov. 7, non-partisan election.

Offices to be voted upon will include school and college boards of trustee.

In addition, the following referenda will be voted upon in the areas affected: Village of Pontoon Beach Library referendum; Village of Maryville real property purchase approval; East Alton proposed annexation referendum; Village of Roxana Laidlaw landfill annexation issue; State Park Place Street Light District tax rate.

Bowles also announced that a bill, recently signed into law by the governor, mandates that all write-in candidates must file an intent to be a write-in with the county clerk in order for any votes cast for that person to be counted. This is a significant change over the old law.

Any qualified voter who will be out of the county on Nov. 7 should contact the county clerk's office concerning absentee voting. Also, physically incapacitated voters can vote an absentee. Applications and information is available through Bowles' office. Absentee voting will also be available with the local election officials after Oct. 15.

Concerned Citizens Inc. will transport the sheets and put them up, said Robert Myers, president of CCI.

Other members of the group, which has 20 members, include George Smith, the group's corporation agent and the assistant recreation director of Madison, and the Rev. Wilbur Owens.

Some history:

In May 1987 School District 12 gave the school, which was erected in 1936 and closed in the 1960s, to the cities of Madison and Venice. Dunbar straddles a border between the two cities and is entirely in the Madison school district.

The two cities then gave a 20-year lease on the property to CCI so it could try to develop it into a retirement home and center for senior citizens.

Initial efforts to secure an agreement with HUD foundered when HUD said it required that CCI hold a 50-year lease.

In November 1988, Mayors John Bellcoff of Madison and Tyrone Echols of Venice sent identical letters to HUD saying "the lease is extended ... to 50 years." The letters said the lease agreement and supporting documents "shall be forwarded to your office at the first available date."

That has not yet been done.

Moreover, the resolutions by which the school district gave the school to the cities, and the ordinances by which the cities gave development rights to CCI, all stipulate that ownership was to revert to the school district if development had not "commenced on or before Nov. 15, 1987."

The school district, however, doesn't want the property back, said School Board President John Hamm and Superintendent of Schools Dan Kostencki.

Kostencki, Hamm and Bellcoff, as well as CCI officers Myers, Smith and Owens, all attended a meeting of the Venice City Council on Sept. 26.

Some of the Venice aldermen were in favor of condemning the building if it could not be secured. "The building should have been bombed a long time ago," Alderman John Henry Williams said. "If you're not going to do anything about it, it should be condemned."

Echols said the cities have to make a "decision on how much longer this albatross is going to be there."

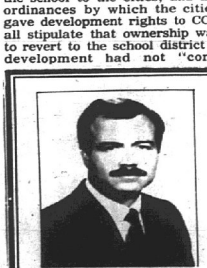

Finally, Bellcoff and Echols agreed to ask a high official of a major local company to get the company to contribute the metal to secure the building. An agreement was secured late last week.

During all this, a Venice businessman expressed an interest in the building, saying he wanted to develop it into apartments. But Henry Baucum never made a formal proposal — apparently partly because he was stymied by the lease agreement between the cities and CCI that was never formally executed.

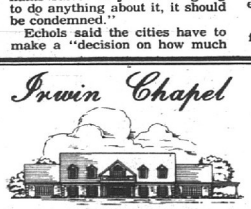

Baucum could not be reached for comment.

Schnucks gives free computers

All elementary and secondary schools in Granite City School District 9 have started collecting register tapes from Schnucks Markets Inc. to get free Apple computers, printers and software through Schnucks Market "Apples for the Students" program.

Chapter I Director Gary Pfroender said, "In this innovative program, Schnucks gives our schools the opportunity to acquire any of five different Apple Computer systems for our classrooms."

"What each school is doing is collecting register tapes from Schnucks Markets and turning them back into the store. Schnucks will take a part of every dollar total on the tapes and buy the computers we want for our schools."

"Each school believes it can acquire a number of computers for its students this year."

Persons who do not have school-age children may send their register tapes to their neighborhood school or the Board of Education Office at 20th and Adams.

For more information contact the principal at your neighborhood school.

Preliminary aptitude test to be held Oct 24 at GCHS

High school sophomores and juniors may register beginning Oct. 12 for the Preliminary Scholastic Aptitude Test of the National Merit Scholarship Qualifying Test (PSAT-NMSQT).

Students in the upper quarter of their class are particularly being urged to take the test, according to Al Rowden, counselor at Granite City High School.

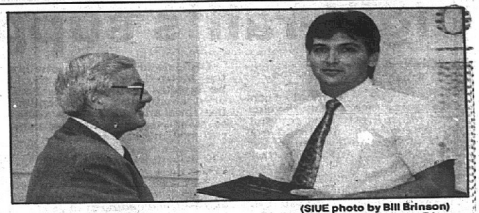

By taking the test, juniors can enter the competition for National Merit Scholarships. They also may then participate in the College Board's Student Search Service, which gives students an opportunity to hear from the colleges they might not otherwise investigate.

The test measures verbal and mathematical aptitude and gives students an opportunity to find out what the Scholastic Aptitude Test (SAT) is like, according to Rowden, who said the test is an important step in making college plans.

With their score reports, students will receive a copy of "About Your PSAT-NMSQT Scores," a booklet containing information on estimating SAT scores, finding out where to get and how to use detailed information on colleges an financial aid, and planning for financial aid.

Students may register at the high school guidance office before and after school. Student bulletins will be available upon payment of the $5.75 testing fee.

The test is co-sponsored by the College Board and the National Merit Scholarship Corp.

Light-rail's supporters mull system expansion

By Craig A. Martin
Staff writer

ST. LOUIS — Officials from the agency overseeing development of the Metro Link commuter system have identified and rated nine possible extensions of the original 18-mile route that would link East St. Louis and north St. Louis County.

The priority list for possible extensions of the light-rail system was presented recently at a meeting of the East-West Gateway Coordinating Council's executive advisory committee.

One route extension would connect Metro Link's East St. Louis terminal with Belleville and Scott Air Force Base.

The other would be a north-south link that would run south from Metro Link's terminal at Lambert-St. Louis International Airport to an area in Mehlville near the South County Center.

Officials are studying whether the Metro Link changes should be strictly light-rail extensions or a combination of extending the lines and adding bus routes to bring commuters to the light-rail system's stations.

The main Metro Link line, which will run from East St. Louis through downtown and out to Lambert Field, has received $288 million in federal funding and is scheduled open in 1993.

At the recent meeting, the nine extensions were grouped into four phases.

Members of the East-West Gateway Coordinating Council will be asked to approve the nine links and the four-phase system sometime in October, said Les Sterman, East-West Gateway's executive director.

Besides the Illinois and south St. Louis County proposals, which make up the first phase, the other nine extensions in priority order are:

> Phase IV—Two extensions, one from downtown St. Louis to Alton and the other from downtown St. Louis to Edwardsville.
> — Metro Link priority list

Phase II—A North Side extension that would run from an area near Florissant Valley Community College to downtown St. Louis, a South Side link that would run from Mehlville to downtown, and a west St. Louis County link that would run from Chesterfield to downtown.

Phase III—A link from the Lambert terminal to a point in St. Peters near Mid-Rivers Mall and a southwest link that would run from the Fenton/Valley Park area through Kirkwood and Webster Groves into downtown.

Phase IV—Two extensions, one from downtown St. Louis to Alton and the other from downtown St. Louis to Edwardsville.

Sterman said that the costs of the possible extensions, the estimated ridership and other financial factors failed to provide a compelling reason to choose one extension over another.

But since prioritization was necessary for planning, he and his staff used other factors to determine rankings, he said. The factors used included political support in the region, potential funding sources, ease of implementation, availability of right-of-way and potential economic benefits, Sterman said.

Sterman also said that he expected that beyond the first two extensions, rankings of other projects probably would change as time wears on and different areas lobby for their extension.

Sterman said it would take probably close to 10 years before any extension could be in use.

Daniel Pelikan, a St. Charles resident who is a member of the board of directors, complained about the St. Charles link not being included until phase III.

Sterman said that among the factors counted against the St. Charles link were bridge access, the lack of a bus system in St. Charles County and the lack of a governmental agency able to help defer some of the costs of construction and operation.

Sun boxes prompt proposal for removal

COLLINSVILLE — Prompted by the St. Louis Sun's recent placement of newspaper boxes, Street Commissioner Fred Krietemeyer has called for the removal of newspaper vending machines that are in the city right of way.

Krietemeyer fears the city could be liable if a motorist stops in the middle of the street to buy a paper and his vehicle is rear-ended.

Krietemeyer said he was told that no one asked permission to place the boxes.

The Sun's circulation manager, Chuck Powell, declined comment when contacted. "If there is a question about our boxes in Collinsville, they should get to us," he said. "We haven't heard from them."

Krietemeyer said he has asked City Clerk Lou Jackstadt to write letters to all newspapers with vending machines on city right of way, asking that the boxes be removed.

Corporate Counsel Dwight Taylor said the city has the right to control street right of way.

Van Buskirk scores two as tourney opens on high note

By Dave Whaley
Executive sports editor

GRANITE CITY — The Tournament of Champions always draws the attention of scores of college soccer coaches. And the Warrior player deemed most eligible for college scrutiny was quite an eyeful Monday.

John Van Buskirk lit up the Gauntlet with a pair of beautiful goals and an entire game of strong play as Granite City opened tournament action with a 4-0 victory over Hazelwood East in Group D play. Since it was the only Group D game of the first day, Granite City took the early lead in that group. The Warriors play Smith/Cotton of Sedalia, Mo., Wednesday at 5 p.m.

"John just had a fabulous game," said Warrior coach Gene Baker. "Obviously, we get a lot of people scouting the games at this tournament. I don't know if that pumped him up, but he usually plays very well anyway."

Van Buskirk was just one of many Warriors who came out flying in the first quarter as Granite City scored three times in the opening 20 minutes to put the game away. Jerry Richardson opened the scoring at 6:43 off a restart. Skip Birdsong headed the ball into the penalty area and Richardson headed it again past Spartan keeper Brian Pagano.

Jay Robertson and Van Buskirk are involved in a spirited battle for the team scoring lead, and both of them put in bids a few minutes later. Robertson was robbed by Pagano on a breakaway, then Van Buskirk blasted one off the crossbar and another just wide in a quick flurry.

Robertson then got his eighth goal of the year as Birdsong picked up his second assist, making a nice pass over the defender and sending Robertson in on left wing. Robertson squeezed the ball between Pagano and the post at 14:52.

"Jay is explosive when he heads for the goal," said Baker. "He could be a big (Scott) Stone for us."

It became 3-0 at 18:27 when Van Buskirk volleyed a shot to the bottom left corner after Chad Lignoul's centering pass from the right side bounced off a defender.

"We made three mistakes in the first quarter, and they took advantage of each one," said Hazelwood East coach Dale Harmon, whose team fell to 3-8-1. "We seem to give up goals in bunches of two or three quite often. I didn't want to play their game, but we weren't quite ready for them."

The Spartans had a few good chances as the Warriors didn't quite maintain the intensity of the first quarter through the rest of the game. Sophomore Bob Spotanski hit the post early in the fourth quarter. But Van Buskirk got his second of the night and eighth of the year at 66:42, blasting a 20-yarder past Pagano. He now leads Robertson in points, 21-19.

"We caught them by surprise with our speed in the first quar-

Cardinal hierarchy jumps right into evaluating for '90

On Baseball

By Rob Rains

The second season — there's no such thing as an off-season anymore — began Monday for the Cardinals.

The team's executives, scouts and minor league officials gathered in St. Petersburg, Fla., for three days of organizational meetings, shaping the direction the team intends to go over the winter.

The meetings were moved to St. Petersburg from St. Louis so the scouts and other officials, including manager Whitey Herzog, were able to spend some time watching the prospects who are in the Instructional League. Nothing dramatic likely came out of the meeting, but hopefully a clear plan has been established for the organization to follow over the winter.

The first decision that hopefully will be made will be to sign a quality free agent starting pitcher. One can only hope the Cardinals have learned from their mistakes on the free agent market last winter and will devote more time and energy to getting somebody signed this year.

As the negotiations for Bruce Hurst and Mike Moore proved last winter, there is more to making an offer than simply the amount of money involved. How you make the offer and the way you approach the matter are equally important.

Obviously, hurler Mark Langston is the biggest fish in this year's free agent pool, and for the Cardinals to sign him, they will have to offer a lot of money, probably $3 million a year for three years. But other teams can and will offer the same amount or more, and what will help make Langston's decision is the way the clubs handle the negotiations. He likely is not going to be swayed by any 24-hour ultimatums — as Hurst wasn't.

One advantage the Cardinals have with Langston that they didn't have with either Hurst or Moore is that Langston has at least been to St. Louis. He has seen the ballpark, the city and the close relationship the team has with its fans. But that by itself won't be enough to get him signed.

If the Cardinals are smart, they will let Herzog and pitching coach Mike Roarke get involved in the negotiations. Their input and personalities might be enough to convince Langston to sign with the Cardinals instead of going to a West Coast team.

While Langston is the best pitcher available, he certainly isn't the only one. There are a lot of pitchers available who could help the Cardinals in 1990 and beyond. Hopefully the club won't let them all get away while they are trying to sign Langston.

Montreal's Bryn Smith would seem to be an attractive possibility, as would John Tudor (considering the price), Frank Tanana and Oil Can Boyd, if you can prove he's healthy.

The other way to improve the pitching staff if the Cardinals don't sign a free agent is through a trade, but it would seem the team would be better able to strengthen itself through free agency, considering the team doesn't have a lot of young players it would be willing to put in a deal.

Other than pitching, the Cardinals' biggest decisions over the winter will be concerning Vince Coleman and the leadoff spot, and finding some righthanded help for the bench, both of which were big problems this year.

One possible way to improve the bench would be to sign Mookie Wilson, who also will be a free agent. The former Met, who has played well in Toronto, is a switch-hitter who could be used defensively as a fourth or fifth outfielder. Another possibility is Pat Tabler of the Kansas City Royals, or even former Cardinal Brian Harper of the Minnesota Twins, who also could be used as a backup catcher.

Another player available is Luis Salazar, but with what he has done so far for the Cubs, it's likely he will want to stay in Chicago.

If the Cardinals decide to trade Coleman, as seems likely, they have a variety of directions in which they could go. They could seek pitching, or they could go after an outfielder and leadoff hitter, or they could trade him for another position player, making another trade possible.

Strike could cut down mighty Flyers

Dave Whaley

It was three years ago today that the East St. Louis Flyers made a trip to Granite City — a trip they will never forget.

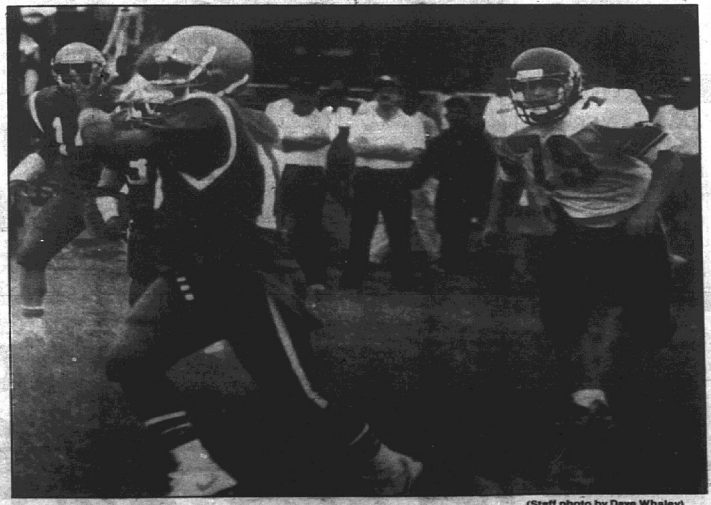

The culprits that day were Tim and Jamie Hogan, Jim Parker, Lee Whiteside, John Kabbendijan, Scott LeVault and many others. That determined bunch of Warriors ended the Flyers' 44-game winning streak before a delirious crowd at Memorial Stadium.

Today is another sad day for the Flyers, but the culprits this time come from within. The teachers strike which began Monday could spell the end of East Side's bid to return to where the Flyers feel they belong — as Illinois state champions.

East Side had won three straight state titles, but the loss in Granite City three years ago today was the beginning of the end of that domination. The Flyers lost in the state quarterfinals that year, then made it to the championship game each of the last two seasons, only to fall short.

So East St. Louis has been 36-4 the last three seasons. I think we'll all agree that's not too bad, but three of the losses have come in the playoffs, so the Fly-

Lady Warriors winless at Collinsville tourney

By Mike Kelly

COLLINSVILLE — The 15th annual Collinsville Volleyball Invitational had its share of surprises and disappointments Saturday at Fletcher Gym.

The Lady Kahoks (8-5), expected to be among the top four seeds, stumbled out of contention. Meanwhile, Mascoutah (7-5) and Red Bud (10-7) grabbed the attention with their impressive showings against the host. Mascoutah defeated Collinsville in a hard-fought match 15-9, 10-15 and 15-3, while Red Bud eased by the Lady Kahoks 15-5 and 15-9.

Upon its disposal of the Kahoks, Red Bud went on to win the championship by knocking off previously unbeaten Illini Central 14-16, 16-14, and 15-9. Mascoutah took home the fourth-place trophy.

Granite City, which lost all three of its matches, showed flashes of coming around against Carbondale and East St. Louis Lincoln. The Lady Warriors (2-10 prior to Monday's match against Highland) first fell to the Terriers 15-12 and 15-11. Following a convincing loss in the first game against the Tigerettes, the Lady Warriors bounced back with a late charge before losing the second contest 15-11.

"If you can see your team play competitively against the good teams, then you're in good shape," said Lady Warrior coach Natalie Buster. "We played Carbondale real tough and our girls never gave up on themselves."

Granite City had the lead in both games against Carbondale, but couldn't hang on either time.

"I wouldn't say we lack the killer instinct," Buster said. "It's just a lack of experience and leadership. Those factors are really hurting us right now."

The Lady Warriors also announced that senior Michelle Bequette has left the team, while senior Priscilla Meyerburg is out for the year with bad knees.

"Losing Priscilla is a tremendous loss," said Buster. "She was really coming on for us, and being a senior we also lose some of that leadership I was talking about. But I do feel the underclassmen, in time, will pick up the slack."

"I was really impressed by our effort against East St. Louis (a 15-2, 15-11 victory), but we just fell apart fundamentally in our losses to Mascoutah and Red Bud," said Collinsville coach Susan Jeffries, a Granite City native. "Maybe the long layoff between games hurt us, but we just didn't communicate on the floor and beat ourselves.

"It's the same situation that plagued us last year, but this team is much better. That's why I felt we had a good chance to finish among the top four in the field. I don't know if we were

IHSA soccer tournament likely to start in Granite City Oct. 21

By Dave Whaley
Executive sports editor

The Illinois High School Association Soccer Tournament will begin Oct. 19 and end Nov. 3-4 with the state finals at Palatine Fremd High School.

The Warriors (10-3-1 before Monday's game) are in Regional A of the Edwardsville Sectional along with Edwardsville, Roxana and Wood River. Granite City will almost certainly host a first-round game on Saturday, Oct. 21. The winner will play for the regional championship on Tuesday, Oct. 24.

Seedings for the regional will be held early next week, but Granite City seems certain to get the top seed. The regional winner will join winners from three other regionals in the Edwardsville Sectional on Oct. 26-28 at the Edwardsville High School Sports Complex off Center Grove Road. There will be two games on Thursday, with the winners playing on Saturday for the championship.

The sectional winner will then face the winner of the Collinsville Sectional in the Granite City Super-Sectional, to be held Tuesday, Oct. 31 at Bob Guelker Field on the campus of SIUE. The winner there joins seven other super-sectional winners at the state tournament, to be held for the third straight year at Palatine Fremd High School. The Warriors went to state each of the last two years, winning it all in 1987 and finishing third last season.

Other regional fields in the Edwardsville Sectional are:

Regional B: Marquette, Alton, Civic Memorial and Jerseyville.

Regional C: Blue Mound, Charleston, Chatham Glenwood, Mattoon, Mt. Zion and Taylorville.

Regional D: Rochester, Springfield Lanphier, Sacred Heart-Griffin, Southeast, Springfield High and Ursuline.

The Regional A winner will play the Regional D winner in the first game at Edwardsville.

The winner of the Granite City Super-Sectional will play in the third quarterfinal game at Palatine. That game is at 5:30 p.m. Nov. 3. Complete times and dates will appear when the seedings are announced next week.

Football

The playoffs will begin on Wednesday, Nov. 1 with 96 first-round games — 16 in each of the six classes.

The second round will be Saturday, Nov. 4, the quarterfinals Nov. 11, the semifinals Nov. 18 and the state title games Nov. 24-25 at Hancock Stadium on the campus of Illinois State University in Normal.

Conference champions will receive automatic playoff berths as long as they meet certain criteria with a minimum of eight games played. At-large berths will be awarded based on won-lost records. Ties will be broken based on strength of schedule.

The pairings will be announced on Oct. 28. Once the 192 qualifying teams have been determined, they will be placed in order according to their current school enrollments. The 32 smallest will be placed in the Class 1A playoffs and so on.

Volleyball

Granite City will compete in the Edwardsville Class AA Regional on Oct. 24-28. Also in that regional will be Edwardsville, Roxana and Triad.

The winner will advance to the Belleville West Sectional on Oct. 31-Nov. 2 along with regional winners from Wood River, Collinsville and Belleville East. The sectional winner will face the Centralia Sectional winner in the Highland Super-Sectional on Nov. 4. The state tournament is Nov. 10-11 at the Prairie Capital Convention Center in Springfield.

Seedings and pairings will be announced next week.

Golf

With regionals being held yesterday, the qualifiers advance to next Tuesday's sectionals.

Qualifiers from Granite City join qualifiers from Jacksonville and Mt. Vernon at the Belleville West Sectional to be held at the St. Clair Country Club in Belleville. The top four teams and top 15 players advanced.

The top three teams and top 12 players from the sectional will advance to the state meet to be held Oct. 13-14 at the Danville Country Club.

Tennis

Granite City will compete in the 11-team Belleville Althoff Sectional on Oct. 14.

Joining the Warriors there will be Marquette, Alton, Althoff, Civic Memorial, Collinsville, East St. Louis Lincoln, East St. Louis, Jerseyville, Roxana and Wood River.

The top four singles players and the top four doubles teams advance to the state tournament, to be held Oct. 19-21 hosted by Prospect High School in Mt. Prospect. There are 30 sectionals throughout the state, and there will be eight singles players and eight doubles teams advancing from the Chicago Public League, meaning there will be 128 singles players and 128 doubles teams at the state tournament.

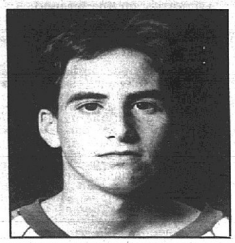

- Cross country

Granite City will run in the 14-team Edwardsville Regional on Oct. 21.

Joining the Warriors will be Alton, Belleville East, Belleville West, Civic Memorial, Cahokia, Collinsville, East St. Louis Lincoln, East St. Louis, Edwardsville, Highland, Mascoutah, O'Fallon and Triad.

The top five teams and the top five runners not on qualifying teams will advance to the Springfield Sectional to be held Oct. 28 along with qualifiers from regionals in Jacksonville, Harrisburg and Rantoul. The top five teams and top seven runners not on qualifying teams will advance to the state meet to be held Nov. 4 at Detweiller Park in Peoria.

Sports shorts

COMING SUNDAY: Jim Chomko of Granite City and his University of Wisconsin-Parkside teammates will play Park College of Missouri on Sunday in Granite City. The 1:30 p.m. NAIA game will feature Chomko, a senior who holds the all-time Parkside record for assists (40). Derrick Wilkinson, Chris Ryan and Carl Chomko are other Granite City natives with the Rangers (8-3-1).

Co-Ed volleyball meeting Thursday

There will be an organizational meeting for Co-Ed volleyball coaches and managers in the Granite City Park District on Thursday at the Brown Recreation Center.

The meeting will begin at 6:30 p.m. in Room 2. Fees for Co-Ed volleyball will be $100 per team. Non-resident fees are $20 per person.

Granite City team set to play at UMSL

The Granite City Flyers will play the Plumbers on Thursday at the UMSL soccer stadium.

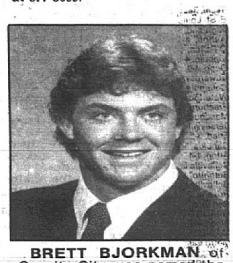

The game, at 5 p.m., is a preliminary to the college game between UMSL and Northeast Missouri State, which is scheduled to begin at 7 p.m. All youth soccer players in the area will be admitted free.

Basketball meeting slated for Oct. 10

There will be an organizational meeting for the Granite City Park District basketball leagues on Oct. 10.

All coaches and managers are urged to attend the meeting, which will be held at 6:30 p.m. that day at the Brown Recreation Center. There will be rules, guidelines and entry forms available. The fee for basketball this year is $175 per team, with nonresidents paying $20 per person.

The park district is also considering a 30 and older league. Anyone with any interest in that should contact Babe Champion at 877-3059.

BRETT BJORKMAN of Granite City was named the Big Central Soccer Conference Offensive Player of the Week for the week ending Sept. 17. Bjorkman, a junior, scored in Drake's 1-0 win over Louisville on Sept. 15, and had an assist in a 2-1 win over Wright State on Sept. 17. The goal and assist make Bjorkman, a 1987 graduate of Granite City High School, the all-time scoring leader at Drake.

mentally tired, but our sets weren't to our spikes and our passes weren't to our setters. Mascoutah and Red Bud took advantage of that and you saw the results."

"Collinsville is a very pesky team, and to beat them on their home floor is a big confidence builder for us," said Mascoutah coach Beth Campana. "We play Collinsville in a couple of weeks (Oct. 16) at our place, and beating them here has shown our kids, especially the younger ones, that we can compete with the good programs in the area."

While the loss to Mascoutah was disappointing, the loss to Red Bud frustrated Jeffries even more.

"The Red Bud game disappointed me the most," said Jefferies. "We just didn't have what it took to win the match. It's probably the first time this year that we've played very inconsistent. We got down on ourselves, couldn't forget our mistakes and just got frustrated.

TEAM STANDINGS

Pool 1: 1. *Red Bud, 2-1; 2. Mascoutah, 2-1; 3. Collinsville, 1-2; 4. East St. Louis, 1-2.

*Red Bud took first place due to a win over Mascoutah in pool play.

Pool 2: 1. Illini Central, 3-0; 2. East St. Louis Lincoln, 2-1; 3. Carbondale, 1-2; 4. GRANITE CITY, 0-3.

Third-place game: East St. Louis Lincoln def. Mascoutah, 15-11, 15-5.

Championship game: Red Bud def. Illini Central, 14-16, 16-14, 16-9.

fer," said Baker after the Warriors had won their seventh straight to raise their record to 11-3-1. "We've been playing very well lately. We just have to avoid getting hyper at times. But I thought Chad Lignoul and Bobby Cheung in particular were very effective tonight."

Brent Broshaw and Ron O'Shia picked up the shutout, with O'Shia playing the fourth quarter.

NOTES: The first big surprise of the tournament came right before the Warrior game when top-ranked CBC was stunned 2-1 by Chaminade. With the Cadets pushing up in the fourth quarter, Chamimade scored on a quick counterattack midway through the period and sprung the upset. McCluer North and Vianney had little trouble, and DeSmet had a surprisingly easy 4-1 win over Hazelwood Central.

•Strike

ers haven't grabbed the brass ring since 1985, when they had probably their best team ever starring the likes of Ronnie Cameron, Arthur Sargent and Michael Cox.

If the strike hurts their chances any this year, what a shame it would be. For Flyer coach Bob Shannon, now 144-20 in 15 seasons, feels he has a squad which can legitimately compete with the best Chicago has to offer in next month's playoffs. It's a feeling Shannon didn't have the last couple of years.

"This could be the best offensive team I've ever had," said Shannon in the wake of Friday's 63-6 pounding of the Warriors at Parsons Field. "We have size, speed and strength. We had a couple of our big people out today with injuries, so we threw the ball more. I feel like we'll be able to run the ball when we get everybody healthy.

"The thing about this team is there are no glaring weaknesses. Our punting and kicking is excellent this year."

Indeed. Kicker Decarlos Nicholson was 9 for 9 on extra points Friday, and all of them were letter perfect. Nicholson is among the area leaders in scoring with 29 points, and they have come one at a time. That's a tribute to him and the Flyers' high-octane offense.

It was mostly Nevilles on Friday. He threw for 205 yards in the first half and finished with 214.

"Rollie is throwing the ball very well right now," said Shannon. "And they had to double cover (Kenneth) Dunn, which opened up other things for us."

Nevilles stuck with Dunn, who caught five passes for 142 yards, including an 85-yarder on the game's first play. Talk about setting the tone.

The Warriors were, of course, impressed. But Ron Yates had reason to feel good. And when you get beat 63-6 and can feel good about it, you're playing some kind of football team.

As Yates said the week before the game, the Warriors usually run the ball fairly well against the Flyers. And it happened again. Granite City picked up 117 yards on the ground. It's hard to believe, but that's better than they've done against anyone else this season. They also had eight first downs.

"We did some different things with our linemen," said Yates. "Our kids played their hearts out. It's the first time we've scored against them since the 1986 game, so we can feel good about that."

The Warriors used all their timeouts to make sure they got the ball in the end zone with eight seconds left on a five-yard pass from Bob Thomas to Eric Lewis. But it was in the first half when the Warriors moved the ball on the ground.

"Granite City came out in a full house backfield at times, which we didn't expect," said Shannon. "We didn't have the ball as much as we would like, but Granite City always has a scrappy team. The score wasn't really indicative of the game. I'm sure they had some of their reserve players in in the second half when we scored some of our touchdowns."

So did the Flyers, but who's counting? The bottom line is East St. Louis is on a collision course with a shot at the state title, but only if the teachers and the school board can get together. Some people say the strike won't last long, but Yates knows better, having sat through two strikes since becoming the Warrior head coach in 1984.

"Once it gets going, things can get said or happen and it just drags on," he said. "I hope they don't have to forfeit any games, because they're too good for that."

"We'll send the players out to work on their own," said Shannon. "I'm sure we have enough team leaders to get everybody together. They can work on conditioning."

That's good, but when it comes down to defending southern Illinois' honor against Chicago's best high school football teams, the Flyers are our only hope.

Come back soon.

Leasing usually not the best auto deal

by Peter Bohr

Now I know how so many people are able to put themselves in the driver's seats of those megabuck BMWs and Mercedes —they lease them.

According to Runzheimer International, a Wisconsin-based management consulting firm, nearly a quarter of all new BMWs and more than a third of all new Mercedes-Benzes are leased.

Moreover, Runzheimer says leasing any kind of car is becoming increasingly popular. Last year almost a million Americans leased their cars for business or personal use. That's twice as many as five years ago. Funny thing, though. Leasing is also the most costly way to drive a car. This is an age when new-car price tags climb like the space shuttle after blast off. Yet people are choosing a more expensive way to drive these more expensive cars. Not even Stacie Allen could find the logic in that.

Leasing is more expensive than buying a car outright with cold cash. It's more expensive than paying for a car with a tax-deductible home-equity loan. And it's even more expensive than buying a car with a conventional auto loan.

IntelliChoice Inc., a California research company, says that under a typical lease arrangement, a 1989 Ford Taurus GL will cost about 13 percent or nearly $2,000 more to lease for five years than to finance for five years. And that assumes an 11 percent auto-loan interest rate, financing a car with a discounted promotional interest rate would cost even less.

It seems many car shoppers are blinded by the fact that monthly lease payments are usually lower than monthly car-loan payments on the same car — which means that instead of buying a car with a loan, they can lease a fancier, more expensive car (like a Mercedes) for the same monthly payment.

The problem is, at the end of the lease they walk away — literally. They no longer have a set of fancy wheels even though they've been forking out money each month. If they had taken out a loan, they would have a car to show for all their payments. And if they had kept good care of the car, they could continue to drive it, free of any payments. Or they could use it as a down payment on a new car.

Many car shoppers also think it's pretty nifty when they don't have to dig into their pockets for a 10 or 20 percent down payment when they sign a lease. That's a nice feature, but it's not free. Because the leasing company is the actual buyer, the company makes the down payment. But you can be sure they'll factor the expense into the monthly lease payments.

There are, however, a couple of circumstances when leasing does make good sense. Suppose you have cash in your pocket, enough to either buy a car outright or to make a decent down payment. And suppose you've just gotten an inside tip from Ivan Boesky, one that will earn you far more than you'll have to pay in higher lease charges —or more than the $2,000 in the example of the Ford Taurus. In that case, invest your cash and lease the car. Of course in reality, most of us aren't privy to inside tips (or if we are, we don't want to end up like Ivan).

Once again suppose you have some cash, but suppose you've also gone on a credit-card spending spree. In that case, you may want to use the cash to pay off the credit cards so you can avoid their high interest charges, and lease a car.

If leasing still sounds appealing, beware of a few potential potholes on your road to automotive happiness. Most leasing contracts allow you to drive the car for an average of 15,000 to 18,000 miles a year. Drive more and you'll pay a penalty.

Beware of up-front, so-called "capital cost reduction" charges. They amount to down payments. That tends to defeat the purpose of leasing.

And finally, beware of early termination penalties.

Car fuel boiling interferes with engine performance

You've been driving for hours on a searing hot day and it's about time to stop for a cool drink. Fifteen minutes later, you try to restart the car, and the engine balks.

Chances are, the engine is flooded due to fuel percolation, according to technical service experts at Holley Replacement Parts Division.

Fuel percolation usually is a summer problem when hot weather, coupled with higher under-the-hood temperatures, can cause gasoline to boil in the fuel bowl, they explain.

Once it begins to boil, gas vapors escape through the vent tube. This causes the cylinder mixture to become overly rich because of gas fumes entering the air cleaner. This, in turn, means starting failure or poor performance.

One of the easiest ways to cure fuel percolation is to remove the carburetor and replace the carburetor/manifold gasket with a thick insulating gasket. Such a gasket helps dissipate heat and prevents the carburetor from getting too hot.

Percolation also can be caused by fuel lines located by a hot spot on the engine.

Inspect the lines, looking for areas where a line may be too close or even resting on the engine block or a hot exhaust manifold, the Holley experts advise.

Microwaves Make Cooking Cleaner, Faster And Easier

With your family's hectic schedule, is mealtime often catch as catch can around your house? Coming up with appealing, fast menus Monday through Friday has become as big a challenge as rush hour.

What's the solution? Zap it!

Microwave ovens have become such an integral part of our daily lives that it is hard to remember what we did without them. Those handy appliances are now in more than two-thirds of all American households. Microwave meal-making is faster, cleaner and easier, three words dear to America's working women in and out of the house. After a heavy-duty work day, light duty in the kitchen is almost always welcome.

But we really should use microwaves for more than just warming food. Preparing meals is easier than you might think. Recipes included here are tasty ways to quickly prepare real meals for your family. The secret lies in quick cooking times and convenient ingredients. None of the recipes require more than 30 minutes to prepare, start to finish.

Ethnic flavor of the dishes adds variety. You can take an around-the-world culinary trip with foods inspired by the cuisines of Thailand, Italy, China, Mexico and the Caribbean.

To make microwave cooking even easier, follow these tips:

- If marketing is done weekly, divide meats and vegetables that will be frozen for end-of-week meals into meal-sized portions. This eliminates waste and cuts defrosting time.
- Use the right size microwave-safe container. One that goes from freezer to oven to table to save clean-up time later is ideal.
- Remember color is part of a meal's appeal. Some foods do not brown as effectively in a microwave oven as they do in conventional cooking. Cover those food with sauces and garnish with vegetables.

Fast Sausage And Peppers

- 1½ lb. sweet Italian sausage, cut into 1-inch pieces
- 1 medium onion, chopped
- 1 medium green pepper, chopped

- ¼ tsp. red hot pepper sauce
- 2 tbsp. chopped parsley

In 2-quart casserole, microwave sausage at HIGH (full power) 6 minutes, stirring once; drain. Stir in onion, green pepper and instant tomato soup mix blended with water, basil and pepper sauce. Microwave 7 minutes, stirring once. Serve, if desired, over hot cooked pasta or Italian bread. Garnish with parsley. Makes about 4 servings.

Thai Dinner Salad

- 2 envelopes spring vegetable Cup-a-Soup instant soup
- ¾ cup water

Microwave uncovered 5 minutes or until beef is almost done, stirring once. Stir in green onions. Let stand 2 minutes. To serve, arrange lettuce leaves or shredded lettuce on serving plate, then top with beef mixture. Stir remaining soup mixture, then drizzle over salad. Makes about 4 servings.

Creamy Cheese Enchiladas

- 1 tbsp. oil
- ½ cup chopped onion
- ¼ tsp. garlic powder
- ¼ tsp. ground cumin
- ½ tsp. oregano
- 1 envelope cream of chicken flavor Cup-a-Soup instant soup
- ½ cup water
- 1 cup drained and chopped whole peeled tomatoes
- ¼ tsp. red hot pepper sauce
- 4 corn tortillas
- 6 oz. Monterey Jack cheese, shredded (about 1½ cups)
- ¼ cup sliced pitted ripe olives

In 1.9-liter round microwave container, microwave oil, ¼ cup chopped onion, garlic powder, cumin and oregano at HIGH (full power) 2 minutes. Stir in instant cream of chicken flavor soup mix blended with water, tomatoes and pepper sauce. Microwave 3 minutes or until thickened.

In 6-by-9-inch 49-ounce microwave container, add 2 tablespoons soup mixture; set aside. Place tortillas between 2 sheets of paper towels; microwave 30 seconds. Using 2 tablespoons soup mixture, brush each tortilla, then top each with ¼ cup cheese, 1 tablespoon onion and 1 tablespoon olives. Roll and place enchiladas in prepared container. Top with remaining soup mixture and cheese. Microwave 3 minutes or until heated through. Garnish, if desired, with sour cream and chopped fresh cilantro. Makes about 2 servings.

Caribbean Coconut Shrimp

Combine coconut, bread crumbs and cumin; turn into microwave bacon rack and microwave at HIGH (full power) 2½ minutes or until golden. Meanwhile, in small bowl with wire whisk or fork, blend instant cream of chicken flavor soup mix, water, lime juice and pepper sauce; let stand 2 minutes to thicken. Stir shrimp into soup mixture, coating well, then add to coconut mixture, coating well.

Place shrimp in two batches in bacon rack and microwave 3 minutes or until done. Serve with Honey-Mustard Dipping Sauce. Makes about 4 servings.

Note: You can substitute 1 pound boneless chicken breasts, cut into 1-inch pieces.

*Honey-Mustard Dipping Sauce: In small bowl, blend ⅓ cup Dijon-style mustard and ⅓ cup honey.

Let stand covered 5 minutes. Serve over hot rice. Makes about 4 servings.

- 10 cups torn lettuce
- 2 large tomatoes, coarsely chopped
- 1 large ripe avocado, peeled, chopped

WARM A CHILLY AUTUMN EVENING with a hearty buffet featuring Savory Beef Stew.

Beef stew greets friends for fall

North, south, east or west, there are few people who can resist a steaming bowl full of savory stew to take the edge off a crisp, autumn day. So invite friends in for a simple buffet meal.

Stews like Savory Beef Stew traditionally spotlight a versatile and economical cut of meat such as beef for stew. Typically, this less-tender meat cut comes from the chuck, brisket or rib section and is cut further in 1- to 2-inch pieces for cooking and eating convenience.

Cooking in liquid, a moist heat cooking method, not only tenderizes the meat, but also helps blend the stew's flavor with its slow cooking.

Savory Beef Stew

- 2½ lb. beef for stew, cut in 1 inch pieces
- 3 large cloves garlic, minced
- 3 tbsp. olive oil
- 2 cups water
- 1 cup dry red wine
- ½ cup tomato paste
- 1 tbsp. packed brown sugar
- 1 tsp. cumin
- 1 tsp. salt
- 3 cinnamon sticks
- 2 bay leaves
- 1½ lb. white boiling onions, peeled
- ¼ cup golden raisins
- 4 cups cooked rice-shaped pasta

Brown beef and garlic in oil in Dutch oven. Pour off drippings. Stir in water, wine, tomato paste, brown sugar, cumin, salt, cinnamon sticks and bay leaves. Cook slowly, tightly covered, 1½ hours.

Add onions. Continue cooking, covered, 25 minutes. Stir in raisins. Cook 5 minutes. Remove from heat. Discard cinnamon sticks and bay leaves.

Serve beef stew over pasta.

PACK A LUNCH with food flair, care and thought.

Lunch boxes pack foods which balance nutrition and variety

Anyone who doesn't think of peanut butter and jelly when talking about lunch box meals probably never went to school. There never can be too many tips for moms or dads trying to keep a good balance between nutrition, food safety, variety, convenience and things their kids actually will eat in those lunch boxes.

The formula for nutritional success is fairly simple. A child's lunch should include a protein-rich food, a complex carbohydrate (often bread), a fruit and/or vegetable, and a dairy food (usually milk) each day. Just remember to avoid excessive amounts of fats, salt or sugar, and try to maintain variety in foods packed.

Eye appeal ranks with taste appeal in child-pleasing school lunches, so consider distinctive shapes, colors and serving ideas. Make a kabob of meat and fruit pieces on a wooden stick. Raw vegetable slices make great finger foods. Cut whole wheat bread into animal shapes with a cookie cutter. Pack colorful containers, napkins and straws for added interest.

Keeping a child's lunch fresh until lunchtime is an important concern. Here are some tips for lunch box food safety:

- Select a sturdy, easy-to-clean lunch box.
- Keep the food preparation area very clean.
- Use only the freshest foods and avoid leftovers more than one day old.
- Keep cold foods cold and hot foods hot. Use a thermos for hot or cold foods. Small reusable ice packs help keep a lunch box chilled.
- Pack foods into a lunch box as close as possible to the time a child leaves for school. Or pack lunch the night before and place the whole lunch box in the refrigerator overnight.
- Clean the lunch box and any containers thoroughly with hot, sudsy water each day. Avoid reusing plastic bags.
- Teach the student the hazards of saving leftover lunch foods to eat in the afternoon.

With cool weather comes an opportunity to pack a warm thermos of homemade soup. It can be a lunch box delight and a good way to get children to eat vegetables. In this recipe, no herbs or spices are added, but family favorites like basil and oregano will remind a child away from home of the care that was packed with it.

Fiesta Vegetable Soup

- 1 tbsp. olive oil
- 1 medium onion, diced
- 2 cups mixed frozen vegetables
- 2½ cups water
- 1 (8 oz.) can whole tomatoes or 2 fresh medium tomatoes
- 3 cubes or tsp. low-sodium beef bouillon powder
- ½ cup broken pieces spaghetti, uncooked

Heat oil in large pot over medium heat. Add onion and vegetables. Cook, stirring occasionally, until lightly browned, about 10 minutes.

Add water, tomatoes with their liquid and bouillon. Turn heat to high. Stir to break up tomatoes. Bring to boil. Reduce to low simmer. Cook, covered, 20 to 30 minutes, stirring occasionally, until vegetables are tender.

Makes four (1-cup) servings, 4 gm. fat and about 120 calories each.

Fiber comes of age in diet with variety and little fat

There are two types of fiber, soluble and insoluble, both of which have important functions in the body and contribute to good health. Recent research indicates that soluble fiber may play a role in helping lower blood cholesterol when eaten regularly as part of a low-fat, low-cholesterol diet.

The term soluble simply means this type of fiber dissolves easily in water. The other major type of fiber is termed insoluble because it does not dissolve in water. Insoluble fiber is best known for promoting regularity.

Among the best sources of soluble fiber are foods made from certain grains, such as whole grain oats, oat bran and whole grain barley; some fruits, such as apples and oranges, and some dry beans and legumes.

Good sources of insoluble fiber include foods made from whole grain wheat and corn, wheat and corn bran, vegetables and nuts.

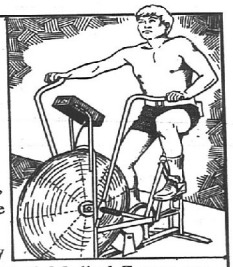

Some foods are better sources of one type of fiber than others, but both types are important. That is why a wide variety of fiber-rich foods should be eaten each day.

LAST-MINUTE LUNCH OR DINNER Is no chore with fresh potatoes and a few extra ingredients.

Sprint to meal with potatoes in quick finish at microwave

A study by the International Microwave Power Institute shows that 75 percent of all American families own a microwave. That accounts for more than 60 million microwave ovens, a number that only can can be expected to increase in coming years.

This Curry Chicken Topped Potato is a snap. Two potatoes take only 6 to 7 minutes in a microwave versus over an hour in a conventional oven. The curry chicken topping also can be microwaved. The best part is that the entire meal can be made in one pan. Another efficient meal, perfect for a quick weekend lunch, is Chili Potatoes.

Microwave Curry Chicken-Topped Potato

- ½ lb. chicken, boned, skinned, cut in bite size pieces
- 1 tbsp. flour
- 1 cup frozen mixed peas and carrots
- ¼ cup dry white wine
- 2 tbsp. chopped onion
- 2 tbsp. golden raisins
- ½ tbsp. curry powder
- Salt and pepper to taste
- Cashew nuts
- 2 (about 8 oz. each) russet potatoes, baked (See Note)

Toss chicken in flour to coat. Combine with peas and carrots, wine, onion, raisins, curry, salt and pepper in 3-quart microwave-safe baking dish. Cook in microwave oven, covered, on medium-high (70 percent) power 10 to 12 minutes until chicken is thoroughly cooked.

Cut or pierce tops of hot potatoes lengthwise. Squeeze ends and push toward center to open. Divide and spoon chicken topping into potatoes.

Makes 4 to 6 servings.

Note: To microwave, pierce scrubbed potatoes several times with fork. Cook according to manufacturer's direction or at high about 7 minutes for two (8-ounce) potatoes (or 5 minutes for 1 potato or 13 minutes for four potatoes). Turn over potatoes and rotate a quarter turn halfway through cooking time. Let stand, covered, 5 minutes.

To bake potatoes conventionally, pierce scrubbed potatoes several times with fork. Bake at 400° for 50 to 60 minutes until tender.

Microwave Chili Potatoes

- 1 can (16 oz.) chili
- 1 can (12 oz.) corn with peppers, drained
- 1 (8 oz.) can tomato sauce
- 1 tbsp. packed brown sugar
- Salt and pepper to taste
- ½ cup (2 oz.) shredded cheddar cheese
- 2 (about 8 oz. each) russet potatoes, baked (See Note above)

Combine chili, corn, tomato sauce and brown sugar in 2-quart microwave-safe baking dish. Cook, covered, at high 4 to 6 minutes until thoroughly heated, stirring every minute after 2 minutes.

Cut or pierce tops of hot potatoes lengthwise. Squeeze ends and push toward center to open. Spoon chili mixture over hot potatoes.

Makes 2 servings.

GARY CRAIG, left, and Jerry Craig, assistant manager and general manager of Kraft/Craig Foodservice, were hosts to Mark Erickson, who helped establish a Culinary Institute of America restaurant in Hyde Park, N.Y., which specializes in healthy haute cuisine. Erickson recently spoke to local restaurateurs at St. Luke's Hospital.

Home health comfort can be ordered out

By Janice Denham
Journal Food Editor

Many people living a fast-paced life face the challenge of ealing healthy food away from home.

Local restaurants which offer food that fits a healthy lifestyle vary in price and location. But St. Andrew's Cafe, a restaurant in Hyde Park, N.Y., operated by the prestigious Culinary Institute of America, has paced a giant step further.

St. Andrew's Cafe offers "good food that is good for you," according to Mark Erickson, director of culinary education for the institute. His responsibilities include supervising the four student-staffed restaurants, including St. Andrew's Cafe.

Erickson was in St. Louis recently to participate in a program called "For Restaurants with a Heart." It was sponsored by the Institute for Health Education at St. Luke's Hospital and by Kraft/Craig Foodservice. The all-day seminar was for restaurants interested in offering customers healthy food.

"It all comes back to one thing," he said. "If it doesn't look good and taste good, people are not going to eat it. You must do it right the first time. They may not order it again. They may not even come to your restaurant again.

"One-third of all meals are consumed outside the home. People want healthy food not as a response (to illness but a support so that they can live without any illness to due improper diet," he said.

Erickson remembered developing meals and recipes for the cafe as the "most challenging cooking I had done in my life. There were no crutches like salt and cream to lean on in the kitchen."

He recommended not drawing attention to the fact that the food may be healthy. Keeping portion size consistent serves several purposes. It controls not only costs but also the amount of food eaten for healthy purposes, and offers consistency in flavor.

Some of his healthful methods include reducing soy sauce, salt and cheese, meat with fat, heavy cream, sour cream and oil. The scheme adds fresh herbs, spices and different kinds of peppers to the dishes. It leans toward ethnic foods, a trend already embracing the land. Evaporated low-fat milk, part-skim ricotta cheese, skim-milk mozzarella cheese and nonfat yogurt are dairy products used generously. Poultry is a favorite protein source.

An unusual approach to the St. Andrew's kitchen is the network of microwave ovens which virtually eliminate steam tables. This allows food to be prepared, individually portioned, then reheated to retain vitamin content, particularly for vegetables, and to offer better quality.

Arrowroot becomes a thickening agent over a roux with flour that relies on browning in fat. A healthier method is to bake flour until it browns, then mix it with stock. He recommended wine as a flavorful shallow poaching liquid.

Salads sound like a healthy realm, but Erickson pointed out leafy pitfalls that can be avoided. To replace traditional whole-egg mayonnaise, he offers plain vinegar, nonfat yogurt or pureed ricotta cheese as toppers.

To serve a low-fat salad, he suggested tossing it with the right amount of dressing rather than serving it separately. This means using only one tablespoon or even less. It still pleasantly satisfies the palate, but be much less than people would serve themselves.

For a tasty vinaigrette, he proposed combining half fresh stock and the other half evenly divided between vinegar and oil.

"This is not something new," he said. "This is something that Europeans have been doing for hundreds of years by adding a little water."

Traditional grilling, particularly over flavored or hard woods, is a delicious alternative to other types of meat or poultry preparation that use a lot of fat. Roasting on a rack lets the fat fall away. He warned that stir-frying should be done with little extra fat, or it becomes "oil blanching."

One-pot German dinner wins in any language

Barbara Hehmeyer, Oakville, moves into the fall mode with German Skillet Dinner. For it she wins this week's prize of certificates for dinner at The Pasta House Company.

Tired of barbecue when the German Festival Recipe Contest was announced last month, she already had been looking for recipe inspiration in fall dishes. A hearty favorite, the dinner is an easy one-pot meal that makes life easy for the dishwasher, too.

This month's contest is the annual cookie competition. Any type—drop, cut-out, no-bake, bar—is welcome. One recipe per household should be sent to: Cookie Recipe Contest, 1215 Fern Ridge Parkway, Suite 108, St. Louis, Mo. 63141. It must be mailed by Oct. 31 to be eligible to win one of the five prizes in November.

Entries will have a chance to win one per week next month. Type or print the recipe legibly on one side of the paper. Include name, address and telephone number on the entry, as well as the name of the Journal you receive.

Be sure to double-check the recipe as it is written for both amounts and directions, including any variations that make this dish special. Submit the recipe in its prize form as you make it.

If there is a history to the recipe, it will be considered part of the entry. It will be used as a basis for selecting winners along with taste and eye appeal. Originality will be considered, although the recipe need not be original. If possible, name the recipe's source.

Winners are notified by mail. Duplicate entries will be considered on the basis of earlier entry or best compliance with the rules. Contest winners may enter again six months after their prize-winning publication date.

German Skillet Dinner

- 6 slices bacon, diced large
- 1 medium head cabbage, cored, cut in 6 to 8 wedges
- 1 medium onion, chopped
- ¼ cup water
- 2 tbsp. sugar
- 1 clove garlic
- 2 tsp. caraway seed
- 1 lb. Polish sausage, cut in 4 to 6 pieces

In large skillet, cook diced bacon until crisp. Remove bacon from skillet. Drain on paper towels. Reserve 2 tablespoons bacon drippings in skillet.

To skillet, add cabbage, onion, water, sugar, garlic and caraway seed. Bring liquid to boiling. Reduce heat. Cover and cook cabbage-onion mixture over medium-low heat 10 minutes.

Add Polish sausage to skillet. Cook, covered, 5 to 10 minutes more until cabbage wedges are tender and sausage is heated through.

Sprinkle bacon over Polish sausage mixture to serve.

Makes 4 to 6 servings. Serve with applesauce and German rye bread for a complete meal.

Micro jargon makes literate seem bright

By Kathy Hanewinkel
Certified Home Economist

Listen up, class, because today we are going to discuss definitions and terms used in microwave cooking and technology. If there is such a thing as microwave language, holding onto this list of jargon may put someone into the literate category when looking for a microwave oven.

•Absorption: Process by which microwave energy is converted to heat within the food. The food absorbs the microwaves.

•Arcing: Discharge of white or bluish flashes or sparks of energy and accompanying sharp crackling sounds. It is often caused by "twist ties" or cups or dinnerware trimmed in silver or gold. Arcing can be a fire hazard and can damage an oven if left unchecked.

•Carousel or merry-go-round: Rotating device upon which food is placed in some microwave ovens.

•Carry-over cooking: see "Standing time."

•Choke seal: Seal around inside of microwave oven door that confines microwaves, thus preventing them from escaping out the closed door. A choke seal is not necessary for microwave oven safety.

•Combination oven: Conventional or convection oven that includes a microwave oven in the same cavity. In this type of oven, the processes may be used separately or alternately together. In a few combination ovens, the processes may be combined simultaneously.

•Conduction: One process by which heat is transferred from one body or molecule to an adjacent one at another temperature.

•Convection: Another method of transferring heat from one body to another. Convection forces the hot air using a fan or circulating water.

•Dielectric: Plastics and most ceramics are examples of dielectric materials because microwaves transmit through them without much loss of power or efficiency.

•Holding time: Length of time a wrapped or covered food will keep or stay warm. "Holding time" also may refer to a "keep warm" or very low (10 percent power or less) setting or feature.

•Magnetron: Vacuum tube that converts electricity to microwaves.

•Megahertz: Microwave ovens operate at 2450 MHz (megahertz) or 2,450,000,000 cycles per second.

•Microwave: Invisible wave of light. Microwaves occur just beyond infra-red on the red end of the color spectrum.

•Microwavable, microwave-proof or microwave-safe: Food or container is appropriate for use in microwave oven.

•Power levels: Microwave oven settings that control the percentage of microwave output. Medium power or 50 percent would mean that the microwaves are on or being emitted 50 percent of the time.

•Probe: Device similar to a thermometer that is connected to a microwave oven. The probe shuts off the microwave operation when it senses the temperature programmed into the panel by the operator has been reached in the food.

•Radiation: Another process by which energy or heat is transferred from one body to another. In radiation energy is transferred by waves. Radiation is the process by which the sun's energy reaches the earth. It is also the main process by which microwave ovens cook food.

•Reflective: Term used for metal objects or materials in the microwave oven which do not absorb, conduct or transmit microwave energy, but reflect it.

•Rotating antenna: Device which distributes microwaves into an oven.

•Sensor: Refers generally to a humidity sensor in some microwave ovens which "senses" the amount of humidity being released by a specific food and thus shuts off the oven when the food reaches the pre-programmed degree of doneness.

•Standing time: Period of time after the microwaving time. During the standing time the microwaved food continues to cook and equalize temperatures through conduction of heat.

•Stirrer fan: Another device by which microwaves are distributed into an oven.

•Transmit: Allow microwaves to pass from one area to another. Microwaves are transmitted through glass and other microwave-safe containers.

•Wattage: Measurement, in terms of watts, of microwave energy effectively delivered to the "load" or amount of food in the cavity of a microwave oven. Most effective portable home-use microwave ovens have magnetrons with wattage ratings between 500 and 750 watts. Usually, the higher the wattage rating, the quicker or more powerful the oven.

Cheer for hearty tailgate sandwich

LAYERS OF MEAT, cheese and olives form a hearty sandwich that chases away appetites when cheering for a favorite team.

When the baseball gloves finally are put to rest and sweatpants replace shorts, Americans themselves turn over to a beloved tradition, football. Along with cheerleaders, marching bands and bleachers, another American tradition that accompanies this pastime is the tailgate picnic.

An early-American tailgate picnic was recorded in 1861, but it had nothing to do with sporting events. It happened at the first Battle of Bull Run when Washington, D.C. socialites set out to the hills to see the heavily-favored North defeat the underdog South. But when the tide turned and Jeff Davis' offense took the lead, the picnickers had to abandon their baskets and leap for their carriages.

Today, tailgate picnics are generally less dangerous, held in stadium parking lots instead of battlefields. They are as individual as those preparing the picnic. Tailgate picnics run an incredibly wide gamut. Some people have candelabras, linen napkins and fine crystal in antique baskets. Others have coolers filled with disposable cups and plastic utensils.

No matter what the picnic looks like, food for outdoor sporting events should be hearty fare that is attractive and transports well. Muffuletta Sandwich, a New Orleans favorite, fits both of these criteria.

This crowd-sized sandwich can be made ahead of time or even the night before the picnic, tightly wrapped and stored in a refrigerator. It is easy to prepare with luncheon meats, cheeses and a flavorful mixture of Spanish and ripe olives. Everything is layered in a hollowed-out loaf of Italian bread. As the sandwich chills, the olives accent the other ingredients to create a flavorful, attractive and truly delicious sandwich.

To complete the tailgate menu, add hot soup, fresh fruit, cheese and nuts. Finish off the meal with chunky chocolate chip cookies for dessert.

For more unique ways to accent foods with olives, send for a new recipe leaflet, "Accent on At-Home Entertaining with Vlasic Olives," which features menus and party ideas for every season of the year. To order, send a self-addressed, stamped, business-size envelope to: Accent with Vlasic Olives, P.O. Box 964, Bensalem, Pa. 19020.

Muffuletta Sandwich

- ½ cup chopped Spanish olives
- ½ cup chopped pitted ripe olives
- ½ cup chopped, drained hot and spicy pickled vegetable garden mix
- ¼ cup finely chopped fresh parsley
- ½ cup olive oil
- 3 tbsp. lemon juice
- 1 clove garlic, minced
- Pinch pepper
- 1 tsp. dried oregano leaves, crushed
- 1 loaf (about 1 lb.) round Italian bread
- 4 oz. sliced ham
- 4 oz. sliced provolone cheese
- 4 oz. sliced salami
- Olives for garnish

In medium bowl, combine Spanish and ripe olives, pickled vegetables, parsley, oil, lemon juice, garlic, pepper and oregano. Mix well. Cover. Refrigerate at least 4 hours or overnight.

Cut bread in half horizontally. Hollow out center of each half, leaving shell 1-inch thick. Save crumbs for another use.

Stir olive mixture well. Spoon half the mixture into bread shell. Top with ham, provolone, salami and remaining olive mixture. Cover with remaining bread shell. Press down lightly.

Wrap in plastic wrap. Refrigerate until serving time, at least 2 hours.

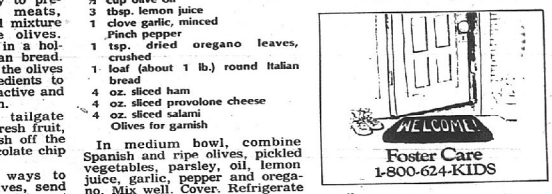

To serve, cut in 8 wedges. Garnish with olives.

Makes 4 servings.

Yom Kippur table is for feast before fast

Holiday feasting is not limited to once a year. Jewish holidays are plentiful as well as rich in symbolic, great-tasting foods. In fact, one particular dish—tzimmes—has come to have meaningful significance for Jewish holidays.

Try Beef Brisket and Carrot Tzimmes, a delicious, satisfying version before the fast for Yom Kippur, which will observe the holiest day of the year on Oct. 9. It's a simple-to-prepare autumn pleaser that makes the most of no-watch, one-pot cooking.

Traditionally, tzimmes is a composite dish of meat, sweetening, vegetables and fruits. Its ingredients vary from holiday to holiday and cook to cook. Carrot tzimmes are especially popular in the fall holidays, like Rosh Hashana, the new year recently celebrated.

The basis of this tempting carrot version is economical boneless beef brisket. Typically, this versatile cut of beef is cooked to fork-tender goodness by braising or cooking in liquid. This cooking method not only tenderizes the meat but helps blend the dish's flavor while also retaining the nutrients of all the dish's ingredients.

The traditional Jewish bread loaf, challah, shaped into a round to represent the circle of life, is a natural accompaniment.

Beef Brisket And Carrot Tzimmes

2½ to 3½ lb. boneless beef brisket
1 tbsp. oil
½ cup chopped onion
2¼ cups water
3 cups carrot coins, cut ¼ inch thick
8 oz. pitted prunes
3 tbsp. packed brown sugar
3 tbsp. honey
1 tbsp. fresh lemon juice
1 tsp. kosher salt
½ tsp. cinnamon
½ tsp. pepper

Trim excess fat from beef brisket. Brown brisket in oil in Dutch oven or 12-inch deep frying pan over medium-high heat. Remove brisket. Pour off drippings.

Cook onion in Dutch oven until tender.

Return brisket to frying pan. Add water. Bring to boil. Reduce heat. Simmer, covered, 2 hours.

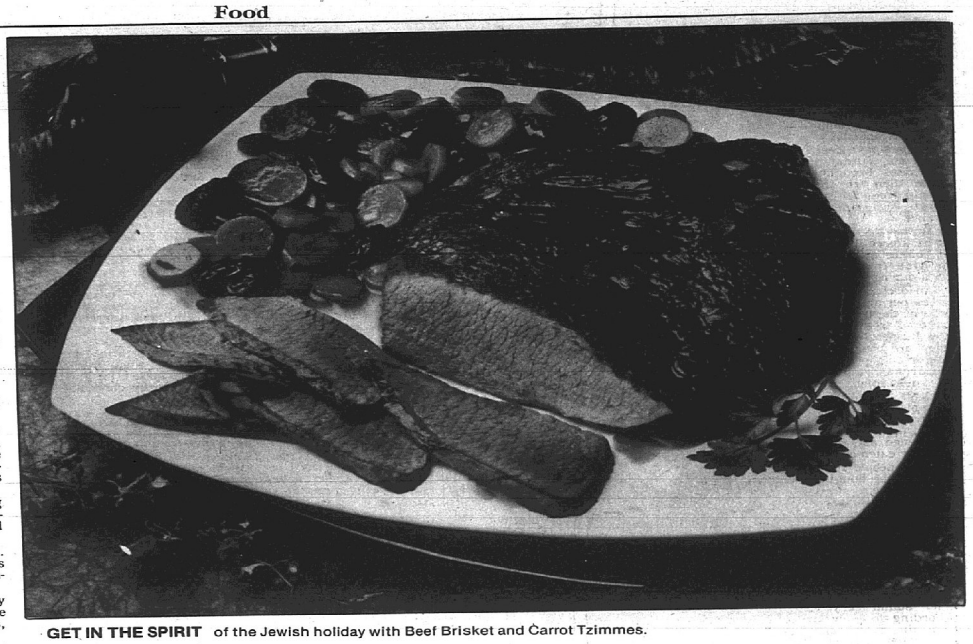

Add carrots, prunes, brown sugar, honey, lemon juice, salt, cinnamon and pepper. Continue cooking slowly, covered, 30 minutes or until brisket and carrots are tender.

Place brisket on carving board. Keep warm. Remove carrots and prunes with slotted spoon to warm platter.

Increase heat to medium-high. Continue cooking until mixture is reduced to 1 cup, about 5 minutes.

Carve brisket diagonally across grain in thin slices. Serve carved brisket with carrots, prunes and sauce.

Note: Boneless beef brisket yields three 3-ounce cooked servings per pound.

GET IN THE SPIRIT of the Jewish holiday with Beef Brisket and Carrot Tzimmes.

Nutrition Fun Day is Oct 18

The four "Food Groupies" and "Mrs. Dietitian" invite area preschools to learn about good nutrition at 10 a.m. Wednesday, Oct. 18, at Nutrition Fun Day, a one-hour program that teaches preschoolers about healthy eating habits. It will be held at St. Mary's Health Center's gymnasium, 6420 Clayton Road.

Children and their teachers will participate in singalongs, skits, games and puppet shows to teach children about the four basic food groups. Each child also will be given complimentary snacks to take home that represent the food groups.

Age-old apples still appeal, are picked as favorite fruit

By Sandra Hounsom
Home Economist

Apples have been around since the time of Adam and Eve. The Pilgrims brought apple seeds with them on the Mayflower. Apple trees for grafting headed west with settlers on wagon trains.

Before refrigeration, apples were stored in cellars along with cabbages and root vegetables to provide fresh fruit and vegetables during the long cold winter.

An orchard can hold 27 to 500 trees per acre, depending on the size of the trees at maturity. An acre of trees can yield at least 200 bushels of apples. Whether they are bought at a supermarket or on a pick-your-own trip to an orchard, apples are one of the most popular fruits available all year long.

Apples show up on the table in many forms—juice, sliced or diced, applesauce, baked, sliced, sweetened and enveloped in pie crust or eaten out-of-hand.

Many people find the taste of apple cider bought in markets today is very similar to apple juice. Traditionally, cider was made by leaving ripe apples in a heap a few days, then crushing and pressing them. The fermentation, which occurs naturally without yeast or sugar, ordinarily would take about a month.

Upon inspection at a supermarket, apple juice and apple cider sound very much alike according to their labels—even from the same supplier—which read "100 percent juice from concentrate." The apple cider appears weaker in color, perhaps because more water has been added to the juice concentrate. Some dictionaries actually lend no distinction, only saying either is made from juices extracted from fruit and used as a beverage.

The most tedious part of preparing apples for cooking is the peeling, coring, cutting and slicing, so eating out-of-hand has timesaving, as well as nutritional, advantages.

However, once the preparation is done, the cooking of apples for sauce can be speeded up with use of a microwave oven. Six or seven medium apples—peeled, cored and sliced—with ¼ cup water in a covered two-quart casserole will microwave on high in 7 to 9 minutes. After this brief time, the "sauce" will look like cooked apple slices. Mash with a fork or potato masher and add cinnamon and/or sweetening as desired, then serve this mouth-watering side dish warm with pancakes, chilled as dessert or salad, or in the following apple torte recipe ("Microwave Baking and Desserts," Cy DeCosse Inc., 1980).

Another treat is to fix hot spiced cider on a cool fall night for sipping in front of a warm fire. This recipe serves well throughout the chilly seasons.

Swedish Apple Torte

- 1½ tbsp. sugar
- ¼ tsp. cinnamon
- ½ cup butter or margarine
- ½ cup shortening
- 3 cups flour
- 1 tsp. salt
- 1 egg, beaten
- ¼ cup whipping cream
- 5 or 6 drops yellow food color
- 1 (1 lb.) can or 2 cups fresh applesauce
- ½ cup whipping cream, whipped, or 1 cup whipped topping

Combine sugar and cinnamon.

Cut butter and shortening into flour and salt at low speed of mixer or with pastry blender until it resembles coarse crumbs.

Combine egg, cream and food coloring. Sprinkle over flour mixture while stirring with fork until dough is just moist enough to hold together. Add a few drops cream, if necessary. Form dough into ball.

Divide in four equal parts. Roll out one part at a time on floured pastry cloth to 10-inch circle, using pie plate for cutting guide. Sprinkle with 1 teaspoon sugar mixture. Cut out 2½- to 3-inch circle from center. Reserve cutout.

Transfer ring to baking dish or pie plate lined with waxed paper. Microwave at high 4 to 6 minutes until pastry appears dry and opaque, rotating a quarter turn after 2 minutes, then every 30 seconds. Watch closely to avoid burning.

Repeat with remaining three pieces pastry.

Cut small circles in half. Microwave on high 1½ to 3 minutes.

Thirty minutes before serving, place one ring on serving plate. Top with one-third of applesauce. Continue stacking rings and applesauce, leaving top plain. Refrigerate.

Garnish with whipped cream and small half circles before serving.

Makes 8 servings.

Hot Spiced Punch

- 12 whole cloves
- 4 lemon slices
- 1 cup apple juice or cider
- ½ cup cranberry juice
- ¼ cup orange juice
- 6 tbsp. canned apricot nectar
- 1 tsp. lemon juice
- 4 sugar cubes
- ½ tsp. cinnamon
- Pinch mace
- Pinch nutmeg

Insert 3 cloves in each lemon slice.

Combine apple, cranberry, orange, apricot and lemon juices in large bowl. Add lemon slices. Heat 12 minutes on high until hot.

Toss sugar cubes with cinnamon, mace and nutmeg. Add 1 cube to each cup when serving.

Makes 4 servings.

Use of franking money divides congressmen

By Jason Moody
Staff writer

WASHINGTON — Proposed legislation to treat drug-addicted mothers and their babies using money obtained from slashing Congressional mailing privileges has area lawmakers sharply divided.

In a debate reminiscent of the heart-tearing Congressional payraise ordeal, the House Sept. 25 voted, 247-137, to endorse a plan banning all unsolicited mass mailing of more than 500 pieces. Of the savings from the ban, $45 million would be reallocated to a program for mothers addicted to drugs.

Although only 11 Republicans voted against the proposal, the response among Democrats ranged from ardent support to outright condemnation.

"This is pure and simple political grandstanding on the part of the Republicans," said Rep. Dick Durbin, D-Springfield, who voted against the provision.

"If they (Republicans) were sincere about this they wouldn't have backed away when we asked them to cut Star Wars to fight the drug war," he added referring to a vote earlier this session.

Meanwhile, Rep. Jerry Costello voted in favor of the resolution, but with an apparent lack of enthusiasm.

"We expect some sort of compromise to come out of conference," said Brian Lott, a press aide for the Belleville Democrat referring to the scheduled House/Senate meeting to reconcile differences between bills passed in the two chambers.

One of the more controversial of Congressional perks, currently the frank allows members to send up to six newsletters per year to each household in their districts.

According to Lott, Costello would like to see Congressional mailings limited to three or four per year but does not support a total ban.

"It's clear there's a lot of political posturing here," said Lott "let's face it, it's hard to say no to something as emotional pregnant mothers on crack," he added.

However, another Illinois Democrat, Rep. Glen Poshard of Carterville, was quick to jump on the anti-franking bandwagon.

"With the drug problem breathing down our necks and budget problems that won't go away, this vote means both a real shift in priorities, and a symbol for the American people that Congress is serious about these problems," Poshard said.

"In five and a half years of public service, in the Illinois State Senate and here in Congress, I have yet to send a newsletter," Poshard said. "And I don't think that has diminished the service I've attempted to provide."

Critics of the franking privilege contend that the free mailings are an unfair campaign tool.

"The use of the frank for mass mailings and newsletters gives incumbents a grossly unfair advantage over their challengers, an advantage for which the American taxpayers is asked to foot the bill," said Fred Wertheimer, president of Common Cause, in a statement to Congress last spring.

However, Durbin said the mailings are a vital part of the Democratic process.

"It's important to notify my constituents about what I'm up to, it's the nature of being a public servant," Durbin said. "I don't agree with those who say we should be doing our work in privacy."

Earlier this month Illinois Democrat Paul Simon was one of only three U.S. Senators to vote against the franking provision, which was introduced by Senator Pete Wilson, R-Calif., as an amendment to a major spending bill for the legislative branch.

October breast cancer month

October has been designated as National Breast Cancer Awareness Month.

The Illinois Cancer Council-Cancer Information Service and other organizations are strongly emphasizing mammography screening for all women age 40 and older for early detection of breast cancer. Ninety percent of women whose breast cancer is found at its earliest stage can be treated successfully.

In addition to improving treatment outcomes, early detection often enables women to opt for less extensive surgery, such as a lumpectomy, which leaves most of the breast intact. This is usually followed by radiation treatment.

A mammogram is an X-ray of the breast. Because a woman's risk for breast cancer increases dramatically with age, the Illinois Cancer Council reports that 11 major medical organizations, including the National Cancer Institute, agree that women should have a mammogram every one to two years and a yearly clinical breast exam beginning at age 40. Both exams should be done annually, after the age of 50.

In 1989 alone, breast cancer will claim the lives of about 2,100 women in Illinois, according to the ICC-Cancer Information Service. The death rate from breast cancer could, however, drop more than 30 percent if all women have mammograms as recommended.

"One in 10 American women will develop breast cancer," said Rosemary Jamiszewski, ICC-Cancer Information Service coordinator. "Mammograms can improve their chances of survival by finding the cancer before it can be felt."

In spite of the life-saving value of mammography, most women do not have regular mammograms as recommended. According to 1987 data from the National Interview Survey, only 17 percent of women 40 and older reported they had had a mammogram within the previous year.

The survey also showed that older women who are at greatest risk for breast cancer are increasingly less likely to have mammograms as they age.

By calling the 1-800-4-CANCER number, information specialists at the Cancer Information Service will be prepared to provide you with information about early detection of breast cancer, mammography, and mammography facilities in your area. They also offer free brochures on mammography. The Illinois Cancer Council-Cancer Information Service is a program of the National Cancer Institute.

Bissell's 'Diamonds' not a bogus mystery

By Pamela Selbert
Journal correspondent

Picture this scene: You're in a creepy old mansion on a stormy night, which just happens to be the 10th anniversary of the owner's sudden and violent death in the home. All these years have passed, and still the murderer is at large.

The ghost of Harvey Bogus, whose mansion it was, wanders wraith-like through the aged halls, unable to find his peace until the crime is solved. On this occasion, Madam Bogus, Harvey's daughter, has gathered a strange group, any one of them capable of murder, to take part in a seance and find the murderer.

Such is the scenario at the Bissell Mansion where a new murder mystery, "Diamonds Are A Ghoul's Best Friend," is playing. Stars Joan Bibeau, as Madam Bogus, and Michael Hogan, as her bizarre assistant Icky, once again are filling the mansion. "Diamonds" is their third Bissell dinner play.

The plot, if not weighty, is clever and fun. The lines, which are carefully scripted but come off sounding spontaneous, are terrific. The names of characters—in these murder mysteries everyone in the audience takes a role—are wonderful. Count among these guests none other than Noel Remorse, Liv Erspotz, Aida Toad, Ima Leper and Mel Linium.

This strange list of guests has assembled for the seance, but rather than Madam Bogus, they are introduced first to Pook (Bibeau) and Jeeves the butler (Hogan).

The story may not be believable, but two Bibeau and Hogan fill roles more than adequately, and guests will no doubt find the evening at Bissell hilarious and lots of good fun.

Mr. Bogus was a jewelry mogul, with vast amounts of assets amassed in diamonds. Whoever did him in, did so no doubt to take possession of the diamonds. But who was it? Any one of the guests could fill the bill. Was it Ima Leper? Ima said once, according to the wild-haired Pook, that she'd give an arm and a leg to have the diamonds. "And look at her," cries Pook, pointing to a slightly flushed Ima, "She's already done it, and has a new set of gruesome appendages."

Jeeves concedes that neither he nor Pook have the talent to solve the mystery, and "Obviously Pook doesn't have the brains for it," he says. Poor Pook can't seem to wrest a thought from her head without smacking it hard. Jeeves assures guests that "since Pook is no longer working in the mansion's kitchen, the food has gone from inedible to actually delicious."

It's time to get on with the meal, which will start with "serpent soup," and guests head to the dining room from the second floor suite where, as always at Bissell, they have enjoyed an hour or so of drinks and excellent hors d'oeuvres.

As the meal progresses so does the mystery, with Bibeau and Hogan appearing in their various roles, and always very much in charge. A recent performance caught a boisterous Mel Linium challenging them in good fun, attempting to take control. But when the show is over, and the actors have resumed their ordinary personas, they insist it is the audience participation, no matter how seemingly unruly, that makes for a good time.

Crowds at the Bissell are growing; many come back for each new show, and become less and less shy about taking part, Bibeau says. "Who knows how many closet performers have emerged in St. Louis thanks to these murder mysteries," she says.

"Diamonds are a Ghoul's Best Friend" runs through Oct. 31, at the Bissell Mansion, 4426 Randall Place. Shows are presented at 7 p.m. every Friday and Saturday, and at 5 p.m. Sunday. Prices range from $23.95 to $28.95 and include a five-course dinner, wine and the show. For information and reservations call 533-9830.
